WEEKLY REVIEW—WHOLESALE MARKETS

In some branches of trade business has slackened perceptibly, while in others, such as coal, woollens, tweeds and dry goods, there is, if anything, an increase in the number of orders...

Activity in trade and commerce is reviving. Confidence is being restored. Money is plentiful, property is cheap, and commodities are selling below the cost of production...

Wool.—The market appears to have undergone but little change—certainly none of a radical character—although the inquiry from manufacturers has continued fair...

SALT.—Owing to the season's imports being now all in store, prices are higher. All the salt in the wharves has been cleared out and prices now represent the value of lots to export...

FRYS.—Although the trade is not by any means lively yet more active movement has taken place, and all the arrivals have met with a fair sale...

GRACERIES.—There has been a more active demand for refined sugar, but the tone of the market is, if anything, easier, although no change has been made in prices...
