Dishman in New York at $16 a Week Falls Heir to Legacy of $50,000

New York, May 14—For nine hours every day Ralph Evans moves sli-ently through Peacock Alley and lesser corridors at the Waldorf-Astoria with a dustpan and a tiny broom. For five years he has been stooping in pursult of scraps of paper and the like. His title is that of houseman; his hours are from 5 o'clock until midnight; his pay is $16 a week. Ralph has liked the pay, the hours, the associations. It's been a good job, but it will all be over pretty soon. The pleasant and orderly routine of a houseman's life is to be shattered because of the death of a brother. That brother left Ralph Evans $50,000. Ralph is gray-halred and sixty years old. He came to the Waldorf five years ago and asked for a job. They gave it to him and with it the

That somebody turned out to be a New York lawyer, who informed the houseman that $50,000 belonging to him was in England and that it would soon be crossing the ocean. Ralph held or to his pan and broom and got further details. Ralph said that when the money comes—and it is expected in a short time—he will probably "blow himself" to a suite of rooms at the hotel for a time and then invest his money in the hotel business.
