I'm glad on his account, and county was of such a rare and radiant character, she was so genial and unaffective dinher manner, so bright and winning, with such an evident liking for his society that Mr. Noel had come away flattering himself that he had made in this quarter a most favourable impression. He had thought of her very much as he went home from the party,—of her interested face, as he talked or danced with her; and she danced delightfully, and was so good as to say that his step perfectly suited hers. He remembered now, too, her remark that it was so delightful to dance with an army officer, aud graduates of the Point, they all seemed to feel so thoroughly at home on the floor.

Noel was not a graduate of the Point by any means; but he saw no reason for disenchanting her on that score. He was quite as good as any of the West Pointers, in his own opinion, and in society was very much more at home than many of their number. As a dances he was leaved to the party of their number. than many of their number. As a dancer he was looked upon in his regiment and throughout the calvary as one of the most accomplished in the whole service, And all this interest and all this cordiality he had accepted without hesitation as a tribute to his own superior qualifications and attractiveness. It was therefore with a feeling akin to pique that he heard of this possible engagement existing between her and Captain Lane. In all the Eleventh Cavalry there was no man whom Gordon Noel feared and possibly hated more than he did Captain Lane, This arose from the fact that Lane as adjutant of the regiment had seen all the communications that haseen all the communications that passed from time to time relative to Noel's absence from his command when his services were most needed and when any man of spirit would have taken every possible precaution to be with it. He knew how silent Lane had always been, and how thorough a custodian of regimental secrets he was considered. But all the same the mere fact that Lane had always been, and how thorough a custodian of regimental secrets he was considered. And so it happened that, that very morning, Gordon Noel was presented to Reginald Vincent, and when Regy went home to luncheon he spoke enthusiastically of his new-found acquaintance, whom he pronounced to be one of the most delightful fellows he had ever met anywhere, and who was such a warm and devoted friend to Captain Lane.
