ears and heavier portions are allowed to settle by themselves, the ensilage will not keep well.

The mixture is to be tramped thoroughly around the sides and in the corners of the silo.

A thin layer of uncut corn stalks should be put between the "Robertson Mixture" and the other contents (if any) of the silo, in order to mark the exact place in the ensilage.

After the silo is filled, the surface should be levelled and thoroughly tramped; and after the lapse of not more than one day, it should be covered to a depth of 6 inches with cut straw or cheap fodder. If this be tramped occasionally, and a foot of cut straw be put on top of that a few days later, probably no waste ensilage will be found on the opening of the silo for feeding.
