

all spray and sucked me under for at least ten seconds. I was in a dazed condition, and could not swim from that time until after I got into the whirlpool. I could hardly get my breath in the spray and water. When the second wave struck me it nearly knocked the life out of me. I could tell that was being tossed about and tumbled around, and once was dashed so near the rocks on the American shore that I would have sold my chances of getting ten feet further alive for three cents. Yet I was powerless to do anything to save myself. This was down below Buttery's elevator. I struck the whirlpool on the Canadian side, and after turning several complete somersaults was sucked under. I thought that was the last of me, but I came up just out of breath within fifty feet of the centre. I tried to swim and could not. A moment later I saw another suck hole bigger than the other, and made a battle for my life. I was able to swim gradually away from it, and soon got near enough to a rock on the Canadian side to get hold of it. I did not have strength enough left to pull myself out, and I must have laid there for a quarter of an hour. I had a big fight to get there. I saw no rocks or logs in the whirlpool. I lay there grasping the rock, and I could not have swum two more strokes. Kendall said that when he was near the rock at Buttery's he thought, "if I turn another somersault, and strike that rock, it will dash my brains out."

Kendall has a wife and child. He is 34 years old, served four years on the Boston police force, and is now a private detective. His wife knew absolutely nothing about his proposition to make the suicidal trip, and he has sent her a telegram to-night telling her what he had done. He will rest here till to-morrow night, when he will return to Boston.
