TO WATCH WHALERS

CANADIAN STEAMER WENT TO HUD-SON BAY TO STOP POACHING.

Made Good Time to Northern Labrader-A Silones of Nearly Twelve Months-Only Six o. the American Whalers Remain at Fresent, But More Than 20 Vessels From New Bedferd Were Formerly in the Industry.

The steamer Neptune, of St. John's, Nfid., chartered by the Ca-John's, Nfid., chartered by the Canadian Government to convey the Low-Moedie expedition, under Dominion Government auspices, to Hudson Bay, has been making good time. She left Halifax on Aug. 22, and six days later called at Nachvak, on Northern Labrador, where she embarked an interpreter. From that point she was to steam north to Cumberland Inlet, in quest of infor-Cumberland Inlet, in quest of information as to the movements of the American whalers, and then, entering American whalers, and then, entering Hudson Strait, would proceed to her winter quarters, near Marble Island, on the northwest coast, near to the musk-ox country, which the white man has never penetrated. After dropping letters at Nngava Bay about Sept. 20, which should have reached St. John's, Nfid., by Oct. 10, nothing more will be heard from her until July next, a period of nearly twelve months.

One of the chief objects of her visit to Hudson Bay is to drive out the American whalers, who have been poaching there for many years. About thirty years ago a fleet of more than twenty vessels from New Bedford hunted the cetaceans there, but, owing to their becoming scarcer, the fleet has dwindled down to six. These are engaged there now, and letters for them were sent on by the Neptune. It is presumed that the missives contain instructions for captains as to how they should act in the event of being ordered to quit, and it is probable that they were instructed to make no trouble, but to submit to the inevitable.

These craft sometimes remain there two or three years. The creature they hunt is the bowhead or Greenland whale, the most valuable species of all, whose "whalebone" is worth $12,000 a ton. An adult male yields about fifteen hundredweight and also about fourteen tons of oil worth $120 a ton.

The whalers harbor in Chesterfield Inlet or Roe's Welcome, a fiord running north, all the winter, and begin the chase of the whales in the the chase of the whales in the spring, the bowheads being believed to enter the bay in June, and after cruising there all summer they return to the Atlantic in the autumn before the Hudson Strait becomes blocked with ice, as the whale, being a mammal, requires a clear area in order to come to the surface to breathe every ten minutes or so.

order to come to the surface to breathe every ten minutes or so. It is rather a curious fact that the Americans prosecute the whale fish-ery only in Hudson Bay, while the Scotch have an equally exclusive en-joyment of that in Cumberland Gulf, outside Hudson Strait. Formerly a lew Scotch whalers entered the bay and the Americans had a station on and the Americans had a station on the gulf. But the Scotch abandoned the former fishery and the Americans recently sold out their station to their Scotch rivals, the two indus-tries being now pursued under different flags, though on the same general lines and with the aid of natives as a prime consideration. The whalers now all employ the Eskimos as part, of their crews. These natives made first-class boat-These natives made first-class boat-men and expert harpooners, and are honest and earnest. They transfer their whole tribe, with their para-phernalia, to the vicinity of a whal-er's anchorage, and sign to help the crew for a weekly ration of four pounds of ship's biscuit, one-quarter pound of coffee, two pounds of mo-lasses and four plugs of tobacco. Other articles they procure by trad-ing musk ox, caribou or scal skins ing musk ox, caribou or scal or wairns of narwhal ivory therefor.

They have lost their ancient arts of chasing these creatures with arrow or harpoon and are no longer proficient in the fashioning or use of the crude weapons of former of the crude weapons of former years. They have come to rely upon the white man's weapons, rifles especially, and they handle these proficiently, but without a grasp of the principles underlying them, so that if the whalers were to be driven away and the Eskimos deprived of the opportunity of replenishing their stores of weapons, ammunitios and minor necessaries, they would soon be reduced to the most desperate straits.

The crews of the whalers no longer live on the ships during the winter, but ashore with the Eskimos, using the same food—seal, walrus, which whole week with version best using the same food—seal, walrus, and whale meat, with vension, bear meat, sea birds and fish to vary it. Salt food is absolutely barred. It produces scurvy very soon, the condition accelerated all too often by the indulgence in alcohol common to sailors. Scores of graves in every harbor attested the fell work done in foul smelling, ill-ventilated cabins, with little or no accreise taken for months. But now the native mode months. But now the native mode of life is adopted and the mortality is very slight.

The Scotch whaling enterprise Cumberland Gulf is prosecuted from two shore stations, ships not being employed at all, except to visit the posts annually and unload stores wo shore stations, snips not being employed at all, except to visit the posts annually and unload stores there, taking away the products in exchange. These stations are at harbors called Blacklead and Kekerbon, and are owned by Messrs. Noble of Aberdeen, who have maintained them for upward of 40 years.

Each station has a Scotch manager, all the rest of the employes being Eskimos, a tribe of these, about one hundred and fifty souls, being settled around each station. Mr. Milne, the chief factor in charge at Blacklead, has been living there for more than thirty years, and has made only one trip to Scotland in the whole period. Mr. Mulch, a younger man, is factor at Kekerbon, Each post has a substantial dwelling and stores for the chief and is supplied with six first-class what boats, with the finest modern outfits, everything being kept in the finest erder. The Eskimos are very teachable, and have no vices, and are a complete contrast to the riotous prews of the whaling vessels, who are the scum of the seafaring world. At both Blacklead and Kekerbon similer astablishments, were mainsimilar establishments were main-tained by the Americans until 1894, when they sold out to the Scotch, after having operated there continuously for over thirty years.

In Cumberland Gulf whales are got off the edge of the ice in the spring when they are on their way north and feed for some time off the mouth of the inlet, on the animalculae which abound there. They are again found there in the autumn, as they come south from the higher latitudes, being driven away by the freezing over of the seas.

CONDITION OF THE INDIANS.

Superintendent of Indian Affairs Iniks

Mr. Frank Pedley, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, recently stated that the Indian population of Canada, which was about 103,000, was he ding its own numerically. The indians were, however, suffering to some extent in their transition from their aboriginal state to that of a higherivilization. Tuberculosis was the disease which was most common among them, and he thought that the new conditions under which the redmen were living might have much to do with the prominence of the disease. They were now largely living in houses, and tent life was being discontinued. The Indians were formerly great meat eaters, and when living so much in the open the meat Mr. Frank Pedley, Superintenden ing so much in the open the meat which they consumed benefited them. Now, when they were more confined, Now, when they were more confined, and unaccustomed to the conditions under which the white people consumed their food, disadvantages arose. Last year the Indians between Qu'Appelle and Battleford had raised over 40,000 bushels of grain. They had their own implements, including threshing machinery. This condition of affairs was becoming more common among the Indians of the Dominion.

minion. In discussing the future of the Canadian Indian said: "The Indians of Canada are fusing with the whites, and I believe a hardy race will result. The struggle of transition from the primitive methods to mod-ern ones has been hard on the refl-men, but I believe the difficulty is over. Take the Indians west of Edover. Take the Indians west of Edmonton—they are working well, and last year raised over 47,000 bushels of grain. This fusion of races is going all over the Dominion, and the result is gratifying and speaks well for those who have controlled the destinies of the red man."

To-day the various tribes had over $4,000,000 on deposit in charge of the Department, $1,000,000 of which belonged to the Six Nation

Canada's Mineral Development.

Canada's Mineral Development.

The development of mining in Canada may not be as rapid as the richness of our heritage in mineral wealth seems to warrant, yet it continues steadily from year to year and holds out abundant promise for the near future. The Canadian Mining Manual has reached, with the current issue, the thirteenth year of its publication, and the statistical record presented is certainly encouraging, if not as great in aggregates as some have felt inclined to expect. The total value of the mineral products of the Dominion for 1892 was materially reduced by the shrinkage materially reduced by the shrinkage in the market price of copper, silver, and lead, and there was also a con-siderable reduction in the gold outsiderable reduction in the gold output irom the Yukon. Yet, in spite of these influences, there was a satisfactory increase in the aggregate. The total output of metallic and non-metallic minerals for 1902 was valued at over $70,000,000 as compared with $69,209,305 during the previous year. Nova Scotia leads in the record of the Provinces, with an output of $19,501,130, and British Columbia is second, with $17,486, Columbia is second, with $17,486,550. This is a reversal of the record of the previous year, when British Columbia led, with $20,086,780, and Nova Scotia was third, with $13,000,000, the Yukon holding second place with $15,500,000.

A Canadian by Birth.

A Canadian by Birth.

One of London's best-known poster designers is a Canadian by birth. John Hassall, whose humorous work is all over the British billboards, sent some sketches up to a London weekly, whose editor astonished him by accepting them. This gave Hassall the ambition to become a great artist; he studied three years on the Continent, and then came to London to do so. He succeeded quickly, and his name is now known nearly all the world over. Most of his ideas (says a writer in Pearson's Magazine) are got from real life. The Underground Railway offers a great field for the gathering of ideas, and when he feels quite bankrupt of suggestions he takes himself in that direction, and, sometimes in a first class, then in a third, he will sit the whole length of the line round, looking about him to see what his fellow-peasengers are like. Later the public has a lough over his "finds."

If you possess a meat chopper try crushing crackers and dry bread through it instead of rolling them for puddings and scallops. Crush dry cheese instead of grating it for omelets. This is also a much easier way to prepare horse radish for the table.

"More haste, less speed," and "hasten slowly," are proverbs born of experience that some things can't be hurried without loss and waste. That perience that some things can't be hurried without loss and waste. That is specially 'rue of eating. The railway lunch habit, "five minutes for refreshments," is a habit most disastrous to the health. You may hurry your eating. You can't hurry your digestion, and the neglect to allow proper time for this important function is the beginning of sorrows to many a busy man. When the tongue is foul, the head aches, then there are sour or bitter risings, undue fullness after eating, hot flushes, irritability, nervousness, irresolution, cold extremities, and other annoying symptoms, be sure the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition have "broken down." DIMINISHED VITALITY.

Some people talk very flippantly some people talk very dispantly about diminished vitality.
They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that it is that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depend.

Diminished vitality is early indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer.

The Sick Room.

The American Journal of Nursing urges upon the impromptu nurse in the private home, whether city or country, not to shake blankets and clothing that have been in the sick room out of the windows. Moist sheets hung outside of the door of the apartment in which there is a contagious case, says this authority, will do much to prevent the passage of infectious dust to other parts of the house. A weak solution of soda or carbolic acid should be used to keep this barrier wet and should be applied by some one on the "clean side" of the apartments. Soiled linen should he placed under water in the sick room and boiled before being handled by any one outside. Nothing should be taken to the laundry in a dry condition. The patient's silver and dishes should be cleansed in the room and before returning for general use should be thoroughly boiled.
