Louden Barn Equipment

Louden equipment makes possible a clean, sanitary barn with a minimum of expense. When cows are transferred from dark, dirty barns to Louden barns the milk flow often increases from 15 to 25 per cent, and the labor of caring for the herd is reduced from one third to one half. Louden equipment is just as great an economy for the man with a half dozen head of stock as for the man with hundreds of animals. The percentage of labor saved is the same.

The Louden Line of Sanitary Steel Equipment Includes:

A Contrast of Two Careers

"Let trade and commerce, laws and learning die, But leave us still our old nobility."

It is hard to realize that these words, like the Duke of Norfolk's advice to starving people, were uttered in all sincerity. They furnish a glaring instance of the besotted stupidity which so often forms a large part of the class feeling engendered in a privileged class.

In one of the speeches made by Bright in 1843, given in the book before us, he pours blazing indignation over the advice of "a sleek and fat dean, a great dignitary and a great philosopher," who advised the working people to eat mangel-wurzels; and in the same speech he quoted, with like indignation, the diploma of honor, with a prize of two pound, given by the West Suffolk Agricultural Association, of which the Duke of Grafton was president, to "William Bureh, aged eighty-two, of the parish of Stowapland, 25th September, 1840, for having brought up nine children without relief, except when flour was very dear."

Malignity and Misrepresentation

During the years of the Anti-Corn Law agitation, Bright and Cobden were pursued by the bitterest malignity of ridicule, misrepresentation and vituperation, in which the London Times took the lead. Cobden and Bright made a great team and the agitation they worked up was something the like of which was never before known in any country. They travelled from end to end of the country, holding meetings every day and every night, their speeches burning with apostolic fervour, which made them wholly different from the speeches of the Whig and Tory politicians. The privileged interests thought of taking steps to suppress the agitation by force, but had to abandon that idea.

The mass of the people rallied around Bright and Cobden, knowing that these two men were dominated wholly and sincerely by the convictions to which Bright gave expression when he said: "Rich and great men can take care of themselves, but the poor and defenceless, the men with small cottages and large families, the men who must work six days every week if they are to live in anything like comfort for a week, these men want defenders, they want men to maintain their position in parliament, they want men who will protest against any infringement of their rights."

To be Concluded next week

With the probability of seeding being in full swing in the next few days, all odd jobs should be finished up so that everything will be in readiness for work to go ahead without a stop. The loft should be filled up with enough feed to last thru seeding. Harness should be taken out, cleaned, oiled and properly fitted to each horse.

An interested visitor who was making a call in the tenement district, rising, said: "Well, my good woman, I must go now. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"No, thank ye, mem," replied the submerged one. "Ye mustn't mind if I don't return the call, will ye? I haven't any time to go slummin' myself."

Farmers who have separate houses for their laborers have little difficulty in securing help.

The Life of John Bright

By R. BARRY O'BRIEN

John Bright, the great English statesman, was one of the fathers of Free Trade in Great Britain. He it was who helped Cobden form the Anti-Corn Law League over seventy years ago. His matchless oratory, his unimpeachable integrity, and his intense passion for the welfare of the common people made Bright an invincible force against the powers of privilege. He was one of the few great public men who never sought an office, but fought in the ranks of the common people. By many he is regarded as the greatest Englishman of the past hundred years, and certainly he was the greatest moral force of his generation. Bright refused to bow allegiance to either the Whig or Tory parties and by fighting independently finally triumphed over both the old parties. This book is written by one of Bright's Irish friends and gives a fairly good account of the great reformer's life. The book contains 477 pages. Printed on good paper in large type, and contains an excellent photograph of Bright in the frontispiece. Bound in attractive blue board covers. Postpaid .35
