Mr. Blewett says that Duncan City is growing rapidly and that the population about 500. There are six hotels, four general merchandise stores, two bake shops, two barber shops and numerous other stores there. Already 15 licensed victuallers have applied for licenses to conduct hotels and saloons. There are three small steamers plying on the Howser lake, carrying supplies to the miners, who have locations around the lake.

In speaking about the route into this country he says that steamers leave Nel son on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays for Lardo City and Argenta. Duncan is 12 miles from Duncan City and 14 miles from Argenta. There is no wagon road and the only way to Duncan City is over trails, either on foot or on horseback. Freight is taken in small boats up the stream that connects Kootenay lake with Howser lake. Large steamers were tried on this stream, but the bends are too sharp and the current too swift for them, and the experiments were not successfui Small boats can make the journey. These little craft accomplish the up trip in from a day to a day and a half and carry from mert with disaster. One a few days sinc? was overturned and its cargo of whisky

Mike Cooper States His Experience With the Indians Over the Line.

Michael Cooper, a well known miner, who has worked at the War Eagle, Centre Star and other Rossland mines for the past four years, but who is at present doing some work on his own properties just over the line near Northport, has some interesting experience with the Indians on the reservation and the police authorities at Northport. Cooper that horse stealing from the Northern country has become a thriving business of of S. A. Hartman, has just returned from late, and he thinks the Indians know a a visit to Duncan City on Howser lake, in the Ainsworth division. Mr. Hartman this district and the Boundary country, has a branch store there. He reports that driven over the line, and after a time are branded by the "finders" and them sold work is being pushed by the railroad as the "finders" personal property. Hin own horse disappeared in May last on its line between Lardo City and Duncan pass; which is within a mile and a Indian, who reluctantly admitted that half of Duncan City. Good progress is he found the animal, and only gave it up On Tuesday of this week Cooper had the captured steed duly stabled at Northport really the Great Northern railway, is during his visit there from his camp for huilding from Argenta to Duncan and has supplies. He says that about 2 o'clock in building from Argenta to Duncan and has 300 men at work. In addition to this prospectors are swarming into the hills and the country appears to be a very rich one. It is one, he says, that will not be lcng in furnishing tonnage to the railways as soon as they are ready for business.

Mr. Rlewett says that Duncan City age of the police authorities, secured the horse a second time without any notice to his lawful owner, the stableman being forced to give up the horse to the Indian, as he was accompanied by a marshal backed up by "papers." In the morning the services of an attorney were secured, and the Northport justice of the peace, and two constables were all brought up with a round turn, the Indian in the meantime having conveniently disappeared The horse was returned to its lawful own er, who in this instance is only out his attorney's fees. Cooper seemed to think there was something very peculiar about the action of the authorities in question, and hinted darkly of an understanding all round. When next he visits Northport, Cooper says he will stay with his horse while in the town limits.
