"A HELPLESS COWARD"

The Western Chronicle in its leading editorial of May 1st, argues that Mr. Borden, the Premier of Canada, is a helpless coward. A Liberal member of parliament, during one of the weeks in which the blockades barred the progress of parliamentary work, advanced about the same sentiment. No leader of the history of Canada, has ever shown more patience in parliament than has Premier Borden. He and his party, awaited patiently day and night, the end of the antics by which the party led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, sought to prevent an honourable return for the money paid by Canadians for the transaction of their business. Subsequently Mr. Borden sought to amend the rules of the House of Commons, so as to prevent a continuance of such senseless obstruction. If that showed a lack of courage, then the late Mr. Gladstone was a coward. Canada has today rules less stringent, than those in force in any federal legislature on earth. Canada was the last among sane legislative bodies, to make House rules so as that a body of insane, fanatical, envious, disloyal politicians, could not continue to obstruct the business of the country. Mr. Borden, the Premier was the man who moved this amendment of the rules of the House. Such individual as the Hon. William Pugsley, of wide historic eminence, F. B. Carvell, the bluffing bullie, the nasty Neely, the notorious Emerson, and a bunch of somewhat more respectable members of parliament, called Mr. Borden every name the English language could produce in their anger, he sat absolutely calm. His supporters obeyed his influence and also remained quiet. Did Mr. Borden show any cowardice in his unparalleled patience and gentleness bearing?

The Western Chronicle is the personal organ of Sir Fred Borden, and H. H. Wickwire. We would like to know if the former, Sir Fred Borden, has any cause for saying that his cousin, R. L. Borden, is a coward? As for what Mr. Wickwire thinks of Premier Borden, we do not imagine anyone cares as it don't count. Sir Frederick Borden knows that his cousin is no coward, there may be among Sir Fred's relatives a coward or two, but if he thinks Premier Borden is a coward, let him come out over his own name and say so, and not skulk behind one of his hirelings. No one ever accused Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of being a coward, and yet he and his party sought to bring in a closure bill, and hadn't the force of character to do so. Every one of his leading newspaper organs said that when parliament assembled after the election of Sept., 1911, that they expected to win, a closure bill would be introduced. It was necessary to both parties that such a bill should go into effect, and to the courage of Hon. R. L. Borden, we are indebted for this amendment to the rules of the House of Commons, so that the business of that Chamber at least, can be transacted without the obstruction of a bunch of irresponsibles. A conspiracy was concocted during the summer of 1912, by which an election was to be forced by obstruction in parliament. Its publicity always followed any visit of Sir Fred Borden, in his less attractive first Lieutenant, to any part of the country. It only happened to be upon the navy question that this great revolution occurred. At present this same bunch of conspirators, are promising an election, because the opposition in parliament will refuse supply. Did anyone ever hear of such an enthusiastic desire for an election. No federal election will occur until the Borden Government gets good and ready. A refusal to grant supply cannot possibly, and will not, add to, or diminish, the years and months before Premier Borden and his government will appeal to the people. The antics of such politicians as the present opposition at Ottawa, and the canned products of their literature producing machine at the same place, is simply amusing to the Borden Government. Those people who follow that class of reading are going to be awfully deluded, and they will live to be very old men before any change of government. Many of their fondest hopes are blasted because of their following after so persistently, the absolute lies of their party organs.

Last year he persuaded the Liberals in the Senate to hold up the Highways Bill introduced by Hon. Frank Cochrane, and providing for improvement of the highways throughout Canada. This session Laurier and his party again appear determined to block this highly meritorious measure. The farmers of Canada, who stand to benefit most by the passage of the Highways Bill will now realize just how little Laurier and the Liberals have their interests at heart. There seems to be no limit to the folly of the Liberal party

The bridegrooms varied from three to nine years old. Most of the contracting parties were held on the laps of their parents during the ceremony, and were provided with candy to keep them quiet.

When the closure resolution was introduced in the House of Commons the Opposition protested that the new rules were much more drastic than the rules in force in England. Premier Borden at once offered to substitute the English rules. Then the Liberal protest flattened out. They would not accept the English rules.
