OLD AGE.

Old age, as it comes in the orderly process of Nature is a beautiful and maje tie thing. The very shadow of eclipse which threatens it, makes it the more prized. It stands for experience, knowledge, wisdom and counsel. That is old age as it should be. But old age as it so often is means nothing but a second childhood of mind and body. What makes the difference? Very largely the care of the stomach. In youth and the full strength of manhood it does not reem to maiter how we treat the stomach. We abuse it, overwork it, injure it. We don't suffer from it much. But when age comes the stomach is worn out. It can't prepare and distribute the needed nourishment to the body, annourished, falls into senile decay. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful medicine for old people whose stomachs are "weak" and whose digections are "poor." Its invigorating effects are felt by mind as well as body. It takes the sting from old age, and makes old people strong. Old age, as it comes in the orderly

LUGARD A MODERN CLIVE PATERSON'S

DRAMATIC CAREER OF NORTHERN

Life One of Most Romantic of African Empire Builders-Landing on Dark Centinent as Half Pay Adventurer, He Won Uganda for British Flag-Lady Lugard as Dashing and Intrepid as Her Husband.

Sir Frederick Lugard, who recently resigned as high commissioner of Northern Nigeria on account of poor health, has been appropriately Jesoribed as a fin de siecle Clive. Now only 48 years old, with ne one knows what great deeds still betore him, his career has been one of the most crimatic and romantic to be found in the list of African empire builders.

Tall, trained down to nothing but skin and lone and muscle, with bright, keen gray eyes, strongly marked aquiline 'jatures, tanned to she color of a pigskin eigar case, and ferociousl' bushy mustache, he is the beau ideal of a modern soldier of fortune.

beau ideal of a modern soldier of fortune.

He came of military stock. His father was a chaplain in the Indian army, but it was as an adventurer, the spiritual descendant of Haw'ins and Drake, bent on such an enterprise as "ningeing the board of the king of Spain," that he found his chance to carve a name for himself in the dark continent.

With $50 in his belt and with practically no outfit at all except an old $50 express rifle, paid for in Indianin the absence of funds—by shoeting a man eating tiger with a reward on his head, Lugard got on a tramp steamer bound for Naples and Suez.

He had already won three medals, in the African, Soudan, and Burma wars, but he was on half pay leave, his money was running short, and he was reduced to strange shifts.

So he took a quick passage on a timber ship bound for Massowah, and slept among the cargo. He took his morning bath, among the sailors in the forecastle, and his meal, of broken victuals with the Italian cook in the galley alongride the engines, and that in the Red Sea, where the heat was enough to grill a black stoker!

An Italian boatswain saw through Lugard's disguise, told him he knew he was a "gentihomme," and astonished him one evening by saying, with a fervid imprecation: "I do anything for you. You want shirt. Here is my other shirt, I give it you, because you have a rood heart."

Never was a present more acceptable. The incident throws a flood of light on the personal qualities which enabled this half pay captain to save Uganda for the empire, and to rise, in the space of four years, to the rank of brigadier-general.

He made his own opportunities. Hearing that a trading post in Nyassaland was besieged by Arab slave traders, as a bit of recreation, he creganized a relief expedition and drove the Arabs off after a sharp fight, in which he was badly wounded. This led to his entering the service of the East Africa company. When Carl Peters was trying to gain a foothold in Uganda for Germany, Lugard made a dash for it with a handful of black soldiers, two white comrades, and a Maxim gun. He bluffed Mwanga into a treaty which ended in annexation. He played a big part in the earl, a dash for it with a handful of black soldiers, two white comrades, and a Maxim gun. He bluffed Mwanga into a treaty which ended in annexation. He played a big part in the early, stormy days of Uganda. He marched against and defeated Kabarega of Unyoro with a force largely composed of Ugandase. He led the Christian livis of Ugandas when they fought and beat the Mohammadan rebels. Then he passed to the other side of Africa, where, something over six years ago, he was appointed high commissioner of Nigeria. His seizure of Sokoto was accomplished so rapidly that the orders of the Colonial Office, to avoid action, only reached him when he was reporting the accomplished fact.

Had Lady Lugard been a man she would probably have rivalled her husband as at empire builder. Few women have been such intrepid travalers or passed through so many adventures. She has had a finger in most of the modern imperial pies. She was a condidanto of Cecil Rhodes, and was mixed up in the Ill-starred Jameson raid. That was when she was still Miss Flora Shaw and the colonial specialist of The London Times, in which capacity she visited most of the remote regions of the empire.

But perhaps her most astonishing feat was framping afoot through the Klondike. Sir Frederick Lugard mather during one of his brief holiday trips home. He saw that she was "the one waman in the world for him" and laid siege to her with the same dash and audacity that characterized bis military exploits. They are a well-matched couple.

Postage Stamps.

The largest postage stamp ever issued was a 5c stamp of the United States, intended for newspaper postage. It was 4 by 2 inches in size. The smallest postage stamp, on the other hand, was a 25 piennig stamp of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, issued in 1856. It was one-fourth the size of an ordinary stamp. Incidentally, it has been calculated that about 13,000 different kinds of postage stamps have been issued by the various countries of the earth. Postage Stamps.

The Tone of the Neighborhood

W. Crawford Sherlock

"It's simply outrageous," declared Mrs. Bagby emphatically. "To think that such people should have moved to West Park is just awful!"

"It's worse when you live opposite them," moaned Mrs. Pratt. "I saw that detestable man sitting on his porch last night in his shirt sleeves, smoking a miserable clay pipe."

"That isn't all," chimed in Mrs. Waters, who managed to gain more infor-mation about her neighbors' doings hibition.

Mrs. Pratt and Mrs. Bagby were of the same opinion, but they could make no suggestion as to how relief could be afforded. At this moment the topic of conversation, James Smith, who had recently occupied a cottage in the fash-lonable suburb of West Park, drove past the house of Mrs. Bagby in a runabout. He was a short, stout, red faced man, wearing an exceedingly loud suit of clothes and an air of indifference to the opinion of the world.

"He looks like a gambler," sniffed Mrs. Waters contemptuously. "He'll have all sorts of low companions down have all sorts of low companions down here, and West Park will be exclusive no longer."

"I'll tell you what we'll do," remarked Mrs. Pratt, who, on account of her proximity to the objectionable neighbor, was more anxious for his removal from West Park. "We'll buy the Eider cottage from this man and sall it to cottage from this man and sell it to cottage from this man and sell it to some desirable person. We will have to pay more than it's worth and sell it at a loss, but it's better to lose a little at a loss, but it's better to lose a little than to have our homes ruined. "Will you take $500?" Mr. Smith had never moved in good society, but he was nevertheless a man of keen judgment. A faint smile appeared around the corners of his rather arge mouth, and his gray eyes twinkled merrily. "This place was for sale a long time
