"Then," St. Barbe continued, "I am to believe that the whole Church hath erred for several centuries, and been under the dominion of a lying spirit. How can that be reconciled with Christ's promise, recorded in St. Matthew's Gospel; and the gate of hell shall not prevail against her?"

"Are you a Papist in disguise, the preacher retorted, that you try to ensnare me with these crafty questions?"

St. Barbe replied that he was an honest Protestant, but finding himself incapable of answering the doubts of a friend, he wished to hear them refuted by Mr. Bittontons.

The preacher declared himself most willing to do this. One must come to the study of the Bible, he said, without pride and carnal passions which are of the devil. "I am with you all days," did not mean that teachers of religion could never fall into error.

"That is quite true," St. Barbe answered. "The words do not refer to every individual teacher, but to the Church, the divinely commissioned teacher. It cannot be doubted that the Baviour would ensure for that divine truth which He makes it incumbent on all men to accept, immutably from corruption until the consummation of ages."

"He has done enough by providing that the truth in all its integrity should always be found in the Holy Scriptures."

"I cannot see that to be enough. The Lord said: Preach the Gospel, teach all nations; and it is to teachers and preachers that this divine assistance is promised."

"But I," said the minister, "can prove from the Bible that for centuries the Church has erred, and taught shameful idolatry, so your interpretation of those passages can not be correct."

Hitherto, he had covered on indifferent subjects, but now my companion began to speak of our plans with regard to the Scottish Queen in a manner which showed that Babbington had fully initiated him into the secret. As Queen Mary had mentioned his name to me as that of a confidential agent, sent by her perfections in Paris, I was not surprised, only there was that about the young man's manner that gave me the impression of great mystery.

He then told me at great length how he had been commissioned by the Archbishop of Glasgow and the Spanish Ambassador in Paris, to organize a means of communicating to the prisoner at Chartley the intelligence of Parma's intended invasion, or any other tidings of consequence; and how on the strength of their communication Chateausseuf had supplied him with means. He proceeded to inform me of the plan concerted with the brewer, also of the successful result of the experiment made in the previous week, in consequence of which Chateausseuf had intrusted to him a packet of most important letters, which were to be transmitted to her on the morrow, with the weekly supply of beer.

Amongst the letters was one from Babbington to Nan, asking for the key to a new alphabet in cipher. "He has done enough by providing that the truth in all its integrity should always be found in the Holy Scriptures."

"I cannot see that to be enough. The Lord said: Preach the Gospel, teach all nations; and it is to teachers and preachers that this divine assistance is promised."

"But I," said the minister, "can prove from the Bible that for centuries the Church has erred, and taught shameful idolatry, so your interpretation of those passages can not be correct."

"What I" responded St. Barbe, "consider that the Divinity of Jesus Christ, upon which the whole fabric of Christianity rests, is conclusive proof that, according to His promise and the general tenor of His teaching, He has provided for mankind an infallible teacher; hence on no single point of doctrine can the Church be in error."
