

Days of Rheumatism Now Over! Wonderful Miracles Worked by "Nerviline"

Its Strange Power is the Marvel of Thousands It Has Cured.

You will welcome the good news that "Nerviline" rapidly relieves the most excruciating pains.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the tissue, and possesses pain-subduing power at least five times greater than anything heretofore discovered. Its curative influence upon rheumatic pains is really wonderful.

Nerviline is offered to the people of this community under a positive guarantee of its reliability.

As a curative agent of severest pain, every rheumatic should test this great remedy.

Rheumatism is the greatest test Nerviline has to meet. It cures pains, big and little, but to rheumatics especially it is a great blessing, just as it is to those who suffer from neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, stiffness or enlarged joints.

Remember this: There is nothing harmful in Nerviline.

You can use it freely on your children for their aches and pains. It is dependable, reliable, safe. Nothing to equal good old Nerviline as a general family remedy.

Get the large 50 cent family bottle; it is far more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere.

WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XIX.

"Love Came Too Late."

He stopped.
"But?" she said, anxiously.
"The money must be paid before long, you know," he went on, "and—
and— See here, Olivia, it rests with you."

"With me?" faintly.
He nodded, keeping his eyes upon the carpet.

"Yes. You—your own agreement. The day we are married it shall be in your power to take all this trouble off your father's shoulders. I've said what I'll do, and I'll do it. The morning of the marriage I shall pay into the Wainford Bank the sum of fifty thousand pounds in your name. You can do what you like with it. Pitch it in the gutter, buy diamonds, or clear the squire—"

Her head drooped lower and lower, then she raised it slowly, and waited for him to continue, for she felt that more was coming.

"Why should we wait?" he continued, insidiously. "I hate long engagements; and the sooner we are married the sooner will the squire be rid of this trouble of his. Will you marry me in a fortnight, Olivia?"

She started, and every drop of blood seemed to leave her face.
She could hear her father's and Faradeane's footsteps outside, catch a word or two spoken by the latter, and his musical, true voice seemed to strike in with that of the man at her side and caused it to sound falser.

"In a fortnight?" she breathed, and her voice sounded strained and harsh.
"Why not?" he insisted. "You can get everything ready by that time. But you are not the one to think of clothes and all that sort of thing when your father's happiness is at stake."

"No," she said in a hard, mechanical voice. "But— and her hands locked together. "Give me another week!"

"Very well," he said, and his eyes shone with satisfaction, for he had expected her to plead for a month at least. "Say three weeks, then. Three weeks!" his face flushed and he smiled, "that will give me time to do up The Maples and make it fit for its mistress, its queen. Ah, how happy we will be, dearest! Where shall we go? Italy, Switzerland, the Lakes?" and he clasped her hand, which seemed to grow colder each moment. "There is nothing in the world you may want

Local Druggists Repair
What Famous
Surgeons Cannot Touch

Shattered nerves are beyond the reach of the Surgeon's knife. What will repair them? Dozens of people right here in your home town will bear testimony to this fact that Zoetic—the health tonic—has set them on their feet again. This famous combination of glycer-phosphates—the actual element of the human body—Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine, supply the very elements that worn out nerves require. In a quiet way the action of Zoetic is truly marvellous. Without a trace of narcotic it induces sound sleep. And following that, better and better digestion. And following that a final and complete rebuilding of the nervous system drained of vitality. Two weeks' faithful use of it will convince you. Because you have been so often misled, expecting much and receiving little, we offer outright to refund the purchase price of Zoetic if at the end of two weeks you cannot report real progress toward better health. Start trying it to-day. Sold by T. McMurdo & Co., Sole Distributing Agents for Newfoundland.

CHAPTER XX.

The announcement of Olivia's approaching marriage caused almost as much excitement as the news of her engagement.

She had insisted upon the ceremony being as quiet as one as possible, and, for a wonder, Bartley Bradstone presented.

Duncan's Deducts Were a Trifle Incomplete— BY DORGAN.

At least a score of young ladies were desirous of acting as bridesmaids upon so famous an occasion, but Olivia desired to limit the number to two, and chose Annie and Mary, much to their delight and Aunt Amelia's chagrin.

"My dear Olivia," she remonstrated in her most dignified manner. "Only two bridesmaids! Why, the veriest pauper has three or four! Let me beg of you to remember your position, and what is due to it! I've nothing to say against Annie and Mary, but I cannot forget that there are others who have a claim upon us. For instance, there are those six dear girls of the duchess'. Now, why—I ask, why—cannot you choose them?"

But Olivia remained as firm over this point as she did upon the question of her trousseau. Aunt Amelia had looked forward to a visit to town, resulting in an extensive outfit, in which costly lace, and still more costly furs and tailor-made dresses should figure largely, and was proportionately disgusted when Olivia announced that she intended buying her things at Wainford, and evidently meant to confine her purchases to very narrow limits.

"Really, my dear Olivia," said Aunt Amelia, "one would think your father hadn't a penny to bless himself with! I call it ridiculous. If you have no proper pride in your own appearance you might at least show some regard for him."

And Olivia, with an aching heart, had to meet the old lady's reproaches with a smile.

On one thing at least she was resolved—that she would not spend one single sovereign more than was absolutely necessary of the money which she knew her father could so ill spare; and perhaps the sharpest pang she endured was felt by her on the morning when he called her into the study and gave her a handsome set of pearls.

"This is my present, dear," he said, his eyes dwelling on her with tender love and pride. "Your mother's jewels are yours by right, and I shall give them to you on the morning of Wednesday, Faradeane," said Bradstone in an offhand way, and with a sidelong glance at Olivia. She kept her eyes fixed upon her plate, and did not see the swift change which came over Faradeane's face. For a moment he was silent, and Bartley Bradstone, taking it for consent, went on, airily, "It isn't a difficult part, I believe; anyway, I'm sure you'd play it capitably—wouldn't he, squire?"

The squire looked at the grave face which had grown paler even than usual, but was perfectly calm and self-possessed.

"Will you, Faradeane?" he said in his quiet way.

Faradeane, carefully avoiding looking in Olivia's direction, shook his head.

"I feel honored by Bradstone's request, sir, but I am sorry to say that I am engaged on Wednesday."
