

New York Success
Coming Here for Rum.

A William Fox super production which was the talk of New York last Monday. It presents William Fox in a role similar to that of Jean Valjean in Victor Hugo's "Les Misérables" in which this famous emotional star made a tremendous hit. Fox reviewers declared that this production surpassed all former efforts. They predicted that the gripping melodrama will establish itself as one of the classics of the screen.

"Perjury" provides a supreme test of dramatic genius. The role of Robert Moore he plays is the sum of human emotion. The first is seen as an active, ambitious factory superintendent of 45, in his home life and in the courtroom. Jealousy and dread, grip him, followed by red rage and despair. Then the prison gates open upon him for twenty years, during which the inherent gentleness and nobility of his nature develop in remarkable degree. The family is left, the prison walls, to misery and the struggle.

The picturing of "Perjury" the famous space at the Fox plant in New York known as the "little studio," part of the "big studio" as well, turned over to the Fox company. Four separate interior sets were erected for the elaborate production, including a large courtroom for the murder trial scene. The cast of "Perjury" includes Sally, Wallace Arskine, John Keble, Frank Shannon, Frank Joyner, La Vell, Gilbert Rooney and Al. Mann. Harry Millard directed production.
