PLENTY OF HAY OFFERED

Sold at From $14 to $14.50 a Ton-Oat Prices Were Inclined to Go Up.

There was a very good supply of hay offered on the market this morning, but despite the fact that the market has been comparatively short of this commodity for some time past, there was not a very strong demand. There was a good deal of poor quality hay offered, and as a result the prices were not very strong. One of two loads sold for $15, but the majority went at $14.50 or $14, while a few loads went even lower. Oats, on the other hand, showed a tendency to increase in price, some selling as high as $1.25. There was a fair supply, and they sold well. Wheat remained at $1.07
