winter's campaign.

Controllers in Peevish Mood at the Meeting Today.

City Engineer Ashplant was the target for a good deal of criticism at the hands of the controllers at the board of control meeting today. He was summoned to the boardroom during the ses sion and a perfect avalanche of ques tions hurled at him as to why this had been done or that neglected.

First of all the controllers wanted to know why the engineer had gone ahead with gravel repairs to Waterloo street between the C. P. R. tracks and Har vard avenue without authority, and what the cost of the work was likely to To the first part of the question Mr. Ashplant replied that the filling-in was being done with gravel drawn from York street excavations, and that new gravel was being used only for dressing. Before he had time to give an estimate of the cost, another query was sprung on him. And thereafter they came so thick and fast that most of received no answer.

When was the Wharncliffe road improvement work going to be finished? Why was not more care taken to see that sewer contractors did not leave large depressions in the roads? What was the reason that the square of sidewalks had not been replaced on the filled-in excavation on Dundas street near The Advertiser office? And so on. Dangerous to Firemen.

Lancaster, on the ground that the city, in putting down pavement on Wortley road, had encreached on his property, was referred to the engineer. Mayor Graham stated that the latter had expressed the opinion previously that Mr. Lancaster's rink projected onto city property.

Approval of plans of two new subdivisions, the Willard property in the northeast end of the city, and the Knollwood Park property, was withheld on the ground that certain streets in both cases should be opened right through the properties instead of coming to a blind end, and that some of the blocks were too long. Application already has been male for registration of these plans, and the board will recommend that the city apply to have the alterations made before registration is allowed.
