Several Important Amendments Urged in Canada's Criminal Code.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent

Ottawa, March 2 .-- A deputation from the Chief Constables' Association urged the minister of justice last evening to have the criminal code violations of the drug act; that bond stand higher for fourteen days. bail might be registered against a man's property; that adultery be made a criminal offense; that a person for whom a warrant has been issued in another place may be arrested on receipt of a telegram from a properly-constituted authority, and the abolition of the right to bet on sheets known as "racing forms," and last-minute racing news.

Superintendent Rogers of the On tario Provincial Police, as chief spokesman, briefly and concisely outlined the present gaps in the criminal code, which often render efforts to ineffective. The recommendations made by the deputation were the outcome of the study and experience of of the association, held in drug traffic was one of the great and the commissioners had spent the problems besetting the police. Super-intendent Rogers declared. Prior to last year the onus was on the accused, now it is on the prosecution; this makes conviction of the guilty doubly putting the onus on the accused was

In the matter of bond bail it has frequently been found that a party having property when the bond is given, sells or otherwise disposes of it within a few weeks, and leaves no jurisdiction. Superintendent Rogers thought the government ought to be enabled to register its claims, something like a caveat, and thus be indemnified. That adultery be made an offense under the criminal sode was also recommended by the chief Cases were cited where from the residence of his wife and Nothing could be done There was also a decided tendency since the war for newcomers from the old land to forget they had a wife or husband across the seas, and live in Canada with someone as man and wife.

He said that by concentrating on these sheets, a man Deficit from in Toronto had just as good a chance of picking a winner at Tia Juana, Mexico, as at the Woodbine. Superintendent McKinney of Toronto had samples of the racing form and the Last Minute with him, and he showed how easy it was for men to be ruined by its insidious lure.

After Sir Lomer had promised his consideration, Chief Trudell of Quebec made a graceful little speech, acting on behalf of his colleagues, thanking for the grant of $500 which the government had provided for the Chief Constables' Association. The likelihood that the Dominion Parliament will be called upon to take legislative action this year on the question of establishing a Na-tional Research Institute in Canada is indicated in a letter received re-cently by Professor Louis A. Wood of Western University from Vice-Principal Frank D. Adams of McGill University.

"It is quite probable," wrote Dr. Adams, "that the bill for the establishment of the institute may be recommended at this session of parliament, but in any event the feeling in favor of the research institute is, I think, growing in the community, and will eventuate in the founding of such an institute, if not now, in the immediate future."

Dr. Adams stressed the fact that Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of trade and commerce, in an address delivered last week at Ottawa, had shown the government to be unquestionably in favor of the project. in favor of the project. Stimulate Interest.

Professor Wood pointed out to The Advertiser today that in order that the thirty odd members of the House of Commons who come from Western Ontario might support a bill to create a research institute, steps should be a research institute, steps should be taken at once to solicit their interest in the matter. Private letters from constituents and resolutions passed by public bodies of whatever nature would do a great deal in furthering the propaganda in favor of national laboratories for Canada. 455.00
