When the Bishop requested the man to assist the sail. When near home the man said, "There is a light at the house, my Lord," but the Bishop must have mistaken the words and pulled the wrong rope line, as the boat jibed over, and a squall striking her the same instant, she immediately upset.

The boatman tried to save the Bishop, but the servant caught hold of him; all three went down, and the man had to let go to save himself. The little boy, who was asleep at the time, was not seen after the accident.

The other three clung to the boat for about half an hour, when they were rescued by people in a boat which happened to come up the river. The bodies were recovered on the 16th ult., near where the boat capsized.
