No Reason for all the Row

The Lenten season was on and Jones, who was a strict churchman, had abstained from the eating of meat for several days. The craving became so strong, however, that he could no longer resist, and purchasing a large ham sandwich he carried it to his bedroom. Just as he unwrapped the package there was a frightful peal of thunder followed by a vivid flash of lightning. Jones raised the window and threw the sandwich out, sadly remarking: "I don't see why there need be all that row over eating one sandwich."

Britain a Stand Between

The London Morning Post warns Pacifists in the United States in the following words: "If the Allies are even reduced to an armistice by the American intrigues they would regard the United States as a traitor to the cause of world freedom. Therefore we suggest to our American cousins that as they have decided to take no part in the war except to make money out of it, it would be wisdom for them to leave us to fight out what is, after all, their battle. Any time in the last ten years we could have had an agreement with Germany by allowing her a free hand across the Atlantic. Great Britain stands between Germany and America like the counter-scarp of a fortress, and if the Americans induce us to peace before this job is finished, what they will have accomplished is to destroy their best defence against Germany. The Americans, who, if we may say so with politeness, are rather painfully ignorant of European affairs, do not seem to realize what Germany is fighting for—not merely the dominion of Europe, but the dominion of the whole world. And if the Allies are defeated what is there to stand against Germany?"

Hog Cholera Commandments

Dr. A. H. Logan, veterinary field agent for the United States Department of Agriculture, who is stationed at the University of Florida, has prepared ten commandments for the control of hog cholera:

1. Through the days of thy labors thou shalt remember that swine require special attention in feeding, drinking, housing and general cleanliness.
2. Thou shalt keep daily vigilance over thy flock of swine lest a portion become stricken with cholera.
3. Knowest thou that cholera infection being of easy distribution by rodents of the field, birds of the air and human agencies, it behooves the master of the farm, his attendants and their wives and children to pursue and slay, yea, even to destroy pigeons, crows, buzzards, stray dogs and other animals that go from farm to farm; for the same reason thou shouldst not permit in visitation upon thy swine habitat strangers, such as peddlers, agents and buyers; nay, not even neighbors, lest they introduce cholera and lead to the destruction of thy herd.
4. Watch thy neighbor's herd as thine own, for often cholera hath stricken his herd and he remaineth silent.
5. Should it come to pass that the scourge, cholera, infect thy herd, isolate the afflicted from the well, using a goodly distance between.
6. Should death overtake one or more of thy porkers, thou shalt observe strictly the Biblical injunction, ashes to ashes.
7. When cholera is rampant over the land, be thou ever watchful of thine animals. Thou shouldst provide a good fence for their protection. Thou shouldst forever banish from thy premises the filthy, germ-laden wallow hole; thou shouldst keep thy hogs in good health, free from external parasites, worms, thereby increasing their resistance to disease.
8. Thou shouldst keep thy swine habitat clean and disinfected at all times, providing a concrete wallow and crude oil for a dip and plenty of air-slacked lime scattered over the premises.
9. With the fulfillment of these things, and still thy beasts be troubled and thy mind filled with fear lest the danger to thy herd be imminent, betake thyself to counselors, wise in cholera lore. They will instruct thee in the way of protecting thy swine through immunization by anti-hog cholera serum.
10. When inoculation hath become necessary and imperative to safeguard the herd, thou shalt admonish to employ a competent person to apply the treatment and be ye also certain that good, potent serum be used. All these things shall be revealed by the counselors and if heeded by thee in the days to come, the fruit of thy labors shall profit thee much and thy nights shall be passed in peace and rest.

EGGS IN HEATED RICE.

A Way the Chinese Have For Hatching Ducks and Chickens.

The Chinese method of hatching as many as 500 duck and chicken eggs in one sitting has not yet been adopted in this country.

Unhusked rice is used for the purpose, and when this has been roasted it is either cooled by a fanning process or the wind is allowed to blow through it until it is lukewarm.

The breeder then sprinkles a three inch layer of rice in the bottom of a wooden tub, and on this surface places about 100 eggs; another layer of rice about two inches thick is spread over them, and on this layer eggs are also placed, and the tub is filled in this way until there are six layers of rice and five of eggs, making 500 eggs in all in the tub.

Every twenty-four hours the rice has to be heated, and for this purpose the eggs have to be removed, the bottom layer this time being placed on top and the other layers one row lower down, the eggs that occupied the central position in the tub now being placed at the edges.

There is some difficulty in gauging the exact time at which the eggs will hatch, and unless care is taken some of the young ones are likely to be smothered. This is, of course, the point at which the ability of the expert is shown.

Economical.

A good story is related of an English theatrical manager who by thrift and hard work had amassed a fortune. Previous to the production of one play the stage carpenters had to repair a trap, and the head carpenter went to the manager and informed him that it could not be done in the dark.

"Well, lad, they won't have t' gas," answered the manager. "Here, tak' this and buy a candle."

And he handed him a halfpenny.

The carpenter pleaded that they wanted two in order to get sufficient light.

"How long will t' job take thee?" asked the manager.

"About ten minutes," was the reply.

"Then cut t' candle in two," was the answer. "These won't have any more money."

Identified.

At a very fashionable and equally expensive tailor shop about town a certain middle aged out of town customer discovered that he lacked sufficient change to pay for his humble purchase, a pair of gray gloves.

"May I charge them?" he asked. "I find I haven't my checkbook with me."

"What was the name?" demanded the rather displeased tailor in peremptory manner.

He was told the name and address.

"Oh, that's all right, sir," exclaimed the tailor, now beaming with exaggerated affability. "Your son trades here."

Political Secrets.

Lord Morley tells a story of how a great political secret was kept by three poor Irish journalists. During the preparation of the home rule bill of 1886 Parnell asked Lord Morley for a draft of its main provisions for submission to half a dozen of his confidential colleagues. The draft was given, duly returned, and not a word leaked out.

"Three of the men to whom I showed the draft were newspaper men," said Parnell, "and they were poor men, and any newspaper would have given them £1,000 for it. No wonderful virtue you may say. But how many of your house of commons would believe it?"—London Answers.

The Thrill of Being Wet.

There is something rudimentary and fundamental about having water splashed down upon one and getting completely and deliciously wet—not damp, not moist, but wet, wringing wet. You yourself when a child never enjoyed anything so much as your first trenching in an unforeseen and unavoidable rainstorm—the thrill of being wet, the cool revive of the water on your nose, into your sleeves and down your neck, and the joyous shush of soaked, waterlogged boots. Even the sedum of being rubbed with alcohol, bundled up and warned you would catch your death did not diminish the event. You voted it better than the time you fell off the boat dock; it lasted longer.—Atlantic Monthly.

No Repairs Necessary.

Flubdub—What do you do with an umbrella when it is completely worn out? Harduppe—I generally return it to the fellow I borrowed it from.—Judge.

Aids to Conversation.

"Books help a man's conversation." "Undoubtedly. But the man who buys them seldom gets to be as good a talker as the man who sold them to him."

He is unfortunate and on the road to ruin who will not do what he can, but is ambitious to do what he cannot.—Goethe.
