

Experienced lumbermen have always held that timber cut in the spring was not durable for building purposes. Recent scientific investigations sustain this belief. It is shown that the richer the wood is in phosphoric acid and potassium the more likely it is to rot and mold; wood cut in the spring contains eight times as much of the former and five times as much of the latter as cut in the winter.

A nail which will not leave any nail holes, and is more particularly adapted for attachments and other light lumber, has been patented by J.M. Overell, of Evansville, Ind. The nail is made with a point at each end and with an outwardly-projecting head or should midway between the points. The nail is first driven into the wood by means of a punch which straddles the protruding point and bears on the head. When a sufficient number of nails have been driven into the wood the moulding is placed over them and is driven down in any suitable manner.
