

ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH
FROM THE THRONE—Con.Murphy, Hon. Charles—Con.

amendment; declarations of a promised naval referendum, 514. The claim that it is not just to ask the government for its naval policy; looks as if the government were trying to shelve it, 515. Naval announcements in the 'Gazette,' why made if we are to have no navy? 516. While stating that there will be no navy the government is advertising for all kinds of supplies, 517.

Northrup, W. B. (East Hastings)—357.

Here for the despatch of business; eight days and not a cents worth of good done; the position, 357. After a week's debate the House satisfied with the Speech; two stubborn facts, 358. The resolution of March, 1909. Quotes Lord Tweedmouth, 359. The navy we were to develop was never along the lines laid down by the Admiralty, 360. Dr. Smartt's resolution and proceedings at the conference, 361. The resolution of 1909, a new proposition, the utter absurdity of it, 362. Open questions, quotes Todd. Anson's ruling. not one reference to any naval policy in the Speech, 363. The time of the House being wasted by a discussion certainly out of place, 364.

Oliver, Hon. Frank (Edmonton)—448.

Qualifications of the Finance Minister, he has mistaken Ontario for the Dominion. Tax reduction and trade extension never more alive than now, 448. The monopolies, trusts and combines fought reciprocity in the United States and Canada, 449. A despatch in the Toronto 'World,' Help of British tariff reformers, 450. Gigantic aggregation of capital to defeat reciprocity not for loyalty, but to help the combines and mergers, 451. The only reason wheat goes to Minneapolis is because it is worth more there, 452. No possibility of a valid economic argument against a fair proposition to reduce taxation and extend trade; wheat prices, 453-4. Interests such as the Cockshutt Plough Company relieved at the result of the election; appeals to prejudice and passion; the Montreal 'Star,' 455. The Toronto 'World' and 'News' 'Play Borden,' 456. The 'Orange Sentinel.' A victory of sectional interests of the most debasing and destructive kind, 457. Men who talk of Canadian patriotism and ask that the western farmer be sacrificed to their selfish interest, 458. The financial oligarchy in Montreal and Toronto holds this country under the control of trusts, mergers and combines, 459. They have proved too much and have brought into question their own loyalty. The resolution of 1909, 460. This naval proposition was one which was accepted by the Admiralty as satisfactory, 461. Two years ago a suspicion of danger, to-day Germany and England exchanging practically defiances. The party elected on loyalty cancel the naval preparations, 462. Under the circumstances they cannot avoid the responsibility for having no policy. A coalition government, 463. Have apparently entered into an alliance whereby the interests of the Empire are being sacrificed, 464.

Pugsley, Hon. Wm. (St. John City)—139.

Laurier stands to-day as one of the greatest imperial statesmen. Why he changed his politics, 139. Congratulations to the mover and seconder, New Brunswickers in the west, 140. New England the natural market of the maritime provinces. Arguments used against reciprocity, 141. New Brunswick sent eight out of thirteen in favour of reciprocity, 142. Reciprocity and lumber. Something that appealed to the people of New Brunswick, 143. Nothing would do more for New Brunswick than free entry of her natural products to United States markets, 144. With reciprocity our province would again become prosperous as it was in 1856 to 1866, 145. The annexation argument. Mr. Foster and the Canadian Club, New York, 146. What the Premier said to the people of New Brunswick. The 'Standard's' comment, 147. Insults cast upon the government of the United States, 148. The balance of trade should be in favour of Canada. A plain and simple business agreement, 149. As far as the province of New Brunswick is concerned reciprocity is by no means a dead issue, 150. The alliance between the Conservatives and Nationalists. Mr. Foster and the navy, 151. Mr. Bourassa and the subjects to be submitted to the people in a plebiscite. Construction of highways, 152. Sir James Whitney's suggestion. The government not able to say a word on the naval question, 153. Assistance in building highways would be contrary to the British North America Act. Terminal elevators, 154. No reference in the Speech to the existing ports of Canada. What the late government did, 155. The trade of the port of Montreal has been rapidly increasing. Mr. Borden's message to St. John, 156. Asks that the promises be carried out, 157. The matter of terminal facilities at the port of St. John, 158. He has been charged with spending a very large amount of money in St. John, 159. Another disappointment in the Speech from the Throne, 160. The Intercolonial railway and branch lines. A telegram from Mr. Borden, 161. The amendment should be adopted, 162.

Rainville, J. H. (Chambly-Verchères)—337.

Extraordinary range of the debate; Canada's prosperity, 337. The National Transcontinental railway; assisted immigration; land grants; the Quebec bridge, and prosperity, 338. National prosperity depends greatly on the prosperity of the farmer, the farmer's turn, 339. Our country's constitution shamefully torn to pieces in the autonomy bills; tariff commission approved, 340. The navy not
