Professor Alfred Stansfield,
Department of Mining and Metallurgy,
McGill University.

Dear Professor Stansfield,

I have carefully noted your letter of yesterday. In any questions I asked you about outside income I was not curious; but simply, I hoped that you would tell me that you had added a little to your income in that way. I know that our salaries at McGill are low, and I am always glad to learn of a professor increasing his income in any way which does not interfere with his responsibility to the University.

Ever yours faithfully,

Principal
