

INDEX

- confidence resolution, 103-11 ; becomes attorney-general, 116 ; his oratory, 119 ; at the Portland Railway Convention, 120 ; his views on railway legislation, 126 ; opposes the Shediac Railway, 127 ; his bill for the reduction of salaries defeated in the legislative council, 127 ; decline of popularity, 128 ; appointed a judge, 130 ; Fenety's estimate of, 131 ; appointed lieutenant-governor, 133 ; his religious views, 133 ; as a lecturer, 134 ; takes part in the Aroostook War, 135 ; his love of flowers, 136 ; illness and death, 137 ; character and achievements, 137-9
- Wilmot, William, father of L. A. Wilmot, 3 ; a Baptist local preacher, 10 ; member of the House of Assembly in 1816, 10