Grangers Want

Recommendations by the Order .-The Delegates Present-Municipal Insurance Advocated.

THURSDAY MORNING. The annual meeting of the Dominion Grange Association resumed at 10 o'clock.

The committee on legislation recommended the Legislature of the Province of Ontario be memorialized to have been laid with Police Court Clerk pass an act enabling all municipalities within its jurisdiction to carry their Another recommendation was that the Dominion Government appoint a regular day for the holding of eleccept in cases where the government has been defeated. Also that the Dominion Government be asked to distribute statutes to all magistrates and to the officials of the or country where the San Jose scale is known to exist. Also that the Grange insist on asking that those who wish to receive higher education should pay for it themselves, and that more attention be paid to the public schools. W. Pranglen, St. Thomas, and P.

Southcombe, Clinton, were elected auditors. The secretary presented his report, showing that the Grange, when only two years organized, had a balance of $200; at the end of four years it had increased to $600, and at the end of ten years the balance was swelled to $3,000. This surplus had, however, been wiped out. A communication was presented asking that the Grange use its influence towards securing amendments to the Statute Labor Act, in order to have the work more thoroughly performed. A report was received from the Pro-vincial Grange of the United States showing that it had a balance of $52,-600 invested in bonds drawing 6 per cent interest per annum. The annual meetings of the Grange cost $3,000, all of which was paid out of the income from the balance invested Adjourned until 1:30.

How Little Mary Carley Saved Three Boys.

Got Them All Out.

Port Jervis, March 10.-Other girls ranged by the entertainment commit- Mary Carley a "tomboy." They have have been in the habit of calling Miss sneered at her and tip-tilted noses when she passed and called her "tomboy," because little Mary loves more to play in the company of boys than with girls, because she loves marbles more than dolls, because she prefers to climb a tree to "playing onto, presided, and there was a large house." Yesterday little Mary proved how very near a tomboy can come to being a heroine.

She is about 7 years old, a blonde, with blue eyes, the daughter of Chas.

Carley, a conductor of the Erie Railroad. Yesterday she was watching her brother Charlie, 10 years old; Elmer Hornbeck, 11 years, and George Decker, 9 years, playing "stump" on the ice in the Delaware and Hudson Canal. This dangerous game was too risky for Mary, tomboy if she be, for it consisted in each boy daring the others to follow him on the thin ice, and trying to get nearest the open water at Little Miss Mary shrieked for help, but she did not wait for help to come. "Hold on to the ice, boys," she cried to the boys, but the advice was really not needed, for the boys, with all their strength, were holding on to the edge of the ice, which constantly crumbled under their weight.

Mary ran to a yard nearby, grabbed a long pole, and, climbing down the canal's sloping bank, went as far as she dared out on the ice. Young Hornbeck first grasped the pole and this heroic young tom-boy drew him in until his feet touched the bottom of the canal. In the same way she saved little Decker, and last her brother Charlie. She hugged Charlie, saying: "Oh, I'm so glad you didn't drown," and then, like a woman, however young, she scolded him, saying: "You had no business to go out on that thin ice." When help came it was not needed.

Little Miss Mary is as modest as brave, and thus recounted her adventure: "Oh, I pulled awfully hard, and the ice broke till it made a little channel, where the boys touched the bottom on their toes, and then Elmer climbed up on good ice and was safe. Then I pulled Georgie out, and then Charlie. I was so afraid they would be drowned that I just trembled all over. They are all my playmates, and it would be ful to have them die. But I don't know that I could do it again." Piles! Piles! Itching Piles. Symptoms: Moisture, intense itching and stinging, mostly at night; worse by scratching.
