Answer he had none, nor did I waste words in reply to that gruff challenge. I stood for our Austrian authority in those forests. Back reeled the peasant before my fist, his weapon dropped as he fell, and with my foot upon it, I glanced around a fire that blazed upon the hearth. A dozen pair of eyes met mine; a dozen peasants, maybe more, sprang upon the flag or were scrambling to their feet in evident alarm. Josef Mendt, who had followed me into the house, had drawn a sword and the other troopers stood behind me in the entrance.

"What do ye here?" I demanded harshly, frowning in their scowling faces.

Not a man seemed inclined to answer, moodily, and now one, and then another would loathe his hold on the sword or cudgel he had seized as we entered.

Then spoke an evil-visaged old man who lounged upon the hearth.

"We are poor peasants, Your Excellency,"—the rogue had in his grip the blade of a scythe cunningly spilled to a long, thin handle—"poor peasants who seek shelter from the rain."

I glanced at the Spaniard at my side, with a sudden suspicion that this rascal had gathered at von Wegan's bidding.

"Then get ye gone," I cried, waving little to fear from these fellows who were leaderless it seemed and taken by surprise.

With an ill grace they rose, he who had challenged us in the doorway, clinking at the fallen matchlock.

"Nay," I said, with my foot upon the barrel. "What are these in your hands? Robbers rather than peasants I hold ye, food for the gibbet. Drop your arms, knaves."

For a moment they hesitated, but ignorant of what force might be without and mistaking the troopers' grins, they obeyed, dropping a couple of firearms, a few old swords, the scythes I have mentioned and some heavy cudgels.

"Now, away with you," cried I, "reach to his dwelling, and hark ye, that man hangs whose face I set eyes on again this night."

A moody, scowling band they filed past me through the doorway into the night; the Spaniard watched them keenly as they went and more than once glanced in his face as if recognizing the swart stern features.

"Who are they, thinkest thou?" I asked, when the last had gone and Leon de Portugal led the ladies into the house. For a moment he was silent, then a smile flickered on his lips.

"Nay, I scarce can say, Captain Lealy, brigands, Austrian or Bavarian, cut-throat marauders. Mayhap we had best set out for Rohn with-out delay."

"Are they servants to the Count?" said I. I fancied that I had recognized one and another of the knaves who had beset me when first I set foot in Kels.

He shrugged his shoulders, and pointed to the scattered weapons upon the flags.

"Mayhap, who knows? But without these they are powerless for a while."

In the meantime the two ladies had approached the fire and were drying themselves at the blaze. They had thrown aside their cloaks and their skirts were steaming. The older stood with her hands upon her hips, staring into the heart of the flames, her sister was seated on a pile of brushwood red-eyed and very pale. It was then that I brought me of the necklet-pearls, and all else had been forgotten till that moment. Mayhap till that moment the Spaniard had forgotten them also, though some he had risked so much to gain. Each stole a glance at the sisters and then our eyes met. Blank was

ALD. FRINK TAKES DECIDED OBJECTION

In Francis Kerr Lease Matter Says City's Property is Exploited for Private Purposes.

At the meeting of the general committee of the council yesterday, the question of granting a lease of part of a wharf to Francis Kerr was again brought up. The recorder had previously submitted an opinion that the city had no power to grant a lease of a public wharf and that legislation would have to be obtained if the lease was to hold good.

It transpired that the recorder had been asked by an alderman, whose name was not mentioned, to prepare a notice of a bill for the approval of the bills and by laws committee. The recorder prepared the notice and handed it to the common clerk.

Ald. Frink rather hotly took the recorder to task for preparing a notice of a bill after an illness extending over several months. She is survived by three sons, including Percy B. at home, and three daughters—Misses Isabelle and Florence in Portland (Or.), and Miss M. Hunter, registered in the Graduate Nurses Association here. Many friends will sympathize with them in their great loss.

St. Louis, Mo.—When the elevator fell in the Flaniers' Hotel, and a broken cable came through the top and struck Miss Laura Wind on the head, it was thought that she was killed. At the hospital, the doctor found that three "rats" in her hair had saved her life by breaking the force of the blow.

Senator Lovitt.

Yarmouth, N. S., April 13.—At 3.30 o'clock this afternoon Hon. John Lovitt passed away, after an illness of several months, at his home in Yarmouth. About a month ago he came home from Ottawa and has since remained, confined in his residence. During the past year he has been under a physician's care most of the time and had undergone several operations, which, however, did not make any real improvement. The late Senator Lovitt was born in Yarmouth on October 9, 1832, and was the eldest son of the late J. W. Lovitt. Early in life he followed the sea and soon became a prominent shipmaster. He re-joined the army in 1861, and served in the 18th. After leaving the sea he and his brother engaged in business as shipbuilders and operated under the name of Lovitt & Co., at Sackvilleville and Church Point. They built many large ships and became very wealthy. As the result of their operations. At the same time Mr. Lovitt took an active and intelligent interest in public affairs and represented Yarmouth county in the legislature from 1874 to 1878 when he was elected to be a candidate. He was elected to the house of commons from Yarmouth county at the general election of 1887. In the same year he was unopposed but was immediately re-elected and continued to represent the county until 1891, when he was not a candidate. In December 1896 he was appointed to the senate. He was president of the defunct Bank of Yarmouth.
