

The German building is by long odds the most picturesque of the foreign structures. It is a blend of harmonious, many types of German and Prussian architecture. Its principal suggestion is that of a splendid town hall as it stood in the middle of the last century. It is a fine specimen of the work of the German architect and the lover of architecture and exterior ornamentation will be glad to look at it by the hour. Within it is a most interesting display, consisting principally of books and educational publications, and appliances and German photographs. Here are fine specimens of the handwork of German bookbinders, illustrators and photographers, arts to which the Germans easily lead the world.

Great Britain's Victoria house, which occupies a conspicuous position on the lake front near Uncle Sam's hotel, is somewhat disappointing in its exterior, but within it is rich and delightful. The aim was to show a type of the fine old English half-timbered houses of the fourteenth century, of which many good examples are still extant. Great care has been bestowed on the interior decorations. The library is a fine specimen of work in English oak, and there are fine English English journals are kept on file for the convenience of guests. The drawing room and the great staircase are particularly noteworthy just what the interior of an old English house is like.

Spain is just finishing a handsome building on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Louvre at Versailles. The Victoria house is a commodious structure erected by Canada, and it was one of the first buildings in the group. It is now ready and ready for visiting. Further along the low but abiding of New South Wales, where the progress made by Australia is exemplified, as in many other features of the exposition.

The foreign buildings which will attract much attention, probably, on account of their interesting contents, is that of France, which occupies a commanding position on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Hall of Hercules in the Palace of Versailles, where Benjamin Franklin signed the first treaty made by the United States with another power. Many of the Lafayette relics loaned by the patriotic family are here displayed. With an Ionic pavilion the French have connected the Exhibition hall with a twin structure some sixty feet away, and within the court thus formed they have placed statues, fountains and fountains. The corridor running from one building to the other contains an exhibit which is decidedly French in character. It is that of the City of Paris, and consists in part of large pictures of all the notable streets, boulevards and boulevards in the French capital. There is also a complete exposition of the mechanical department of the Chatham pulp mill, at a handsome salary. The Messrs. Moorey and Sons were the contractors for the erection of the mill, and they have since built all the additions and improvements. These works were all done under the direction of Mr. M. F. Moorey, and his management of affairs so pleased the directors that they offered him the management of the mill. With some parts of the work Mr. Moorey is not at all familiar, but he is energetic and quick to learn and will soon have the business well in hand. His departure from St. John will be regretted by a large number of friends, who, however, will be pleased to hear of his appointment and of the confidence reposed in him. The property at Chatham is said to be worth in the vicinity of $1,000,000.—Globe.

Uncle Tom's Cabin
Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company appears to be one of the organizations that are calculated to run the popular old play off the stage. It appeared here on Monday night and while some of the characters—Topsy and St. Clair, for instance, were well represented, the affair, as a whole was disappointing and, in some features, disgusting.

Mrs. Stevens' Trial
The trial of Mrs. H. T. Stevens of Moncton, charged with causing the death of her adopted daughter, Mabel Glennie Bisset, by criminal negligence, proceeded before Judge Landry at Dorchester. The evidence is about the same as that given at the inquest and preliminary hearing at Moncton.

A Murray Estate Case
The petition of the trustees of William Murray was heard. This is the petition of the trustees of a trust deed, the beneficiaries appointed under a trust deed. Mr. Murray, at the time of the assignment, was carrying on a number of logging operations, and the trustees asked whether they should be paid for carrying on these operations to the benefit of the trust. The petition was turned to McCully's absence of his official position as due to personal feeling we entertain towards him. It is not necessary, we presume, to disavow any such motive, especially as our course in this, as in all similar matters, is followed solely in the discharge of public duty. Hardly a week passes that does not bring its reminder of the difference, our peculiar police magistracy and gentlemanly holding of the positions in other places. A sample of his methods was furnished a day or two ago when he saw a gentleman—a stranger—leave a value at John St. John's store, which is opposite that of Mr. McCully. He assumed at once that the man was pedlar, so he watched the value himself until tea-time and then left directions with a boy at Mr. Herbert Falley's for policeman Rankin, instructing him to arrest the owner of the value when he appeared to claim it and bring him before him. The stranger appeared, after a time, and the policeman arrested him, although told that he was in a hurry to catch the boat for Newcastle. On taking the prisoner before Mr. McCully it transpired that he represented Messrs. Turner & Enlay, of St. John, and had been here visiting relatives, one of whom—a young lady—accompanied him to St. John's store when he went for his value to catch the Nelson for Newcastle. The police magistracy had to apologise for his illegal action and the humiliating position he had placed the young man in, and the latter was obliged to remain in town all night. It may be all right on the whole, but it is a very dangerous person to be clothed with the powers he has.

Just as Good.
Perhaps, but if just as good as Patman's, it is not a very high recommendation for the original and best corn cure? Patman's is in England and the working out of the dangerous sore-producing substances offered by greedy dealers who make larger profits and disregard the interests of consumers. Safe, painless, certain.
