CLEANLINESS IN THE DAIRY.

In traveling over the country and visiting the dairy farms in the summer time, nothing has impressed itself so much on the writer's mind as the necessity of cleanliness, writes Mr. J. H. Brown.

There are so many ways in which milk may be infected with bacterial germs that are detrimental to its welfare, that it keeps a dairyman hustling to get ahead of the germs.

In these days of pasteurization there are some dairymen and hired men who think that if the milk is going to be pasteurized anyway, when it reaches the creamery or city dealer in market milk, it makes no difference whether any good care is given the milk or not.

The writer has actually seen one man spit on his hands right over the milk pail, while sitting on the milk stool, and just before selling in at milking time. He was chewing tobacco and used the juice instead of milk for lubricating his hands.

His excuse was that "all this milk is pasteurized, so it's clean if it is used." It is a fact that pasteurizing covers a multitude of sins on more than one dairy farm in the country.

Cleanliness in every detail is the most important point constantly impressed upon the dairyman and his help, in their daily duties in the dairy, and the dairyman should everywhere milk is handled or stored. Cleanliness may be looked after in all the details of milk production and in all the details of its manufacture.

"Do you tell your wife when you doze through?" "No, she tells me."

Fanshawe's Flirtation. They all thought he would propose and were eagerly waiting for events to shape themselves. Stephen Fanshawe certainly seemed devoted to Edline Gray, and she to him.

It should love to see Edline married," Cora Dale remarked: "she deserves to be happy after her very queer experience."

"Mr. Fanshawe is just the man who'd make her an ideal husband," Susan Cross replied. "But do you think about Mr. St. Eve?"

"I prefer not to think about it at all," St. Eve answered. "How awfully depressing of you!" said Cora, fastening some roses into her belt.

Mr. Fanshawe had shut himself up in his room to read his letter. His hands trembled slightly as he opened it. It ran thus: "Dearest Stephen—When are you coming back to me? I am all, and so tired of being so lonely, surely, it's all over now. I own I was foolish not to marry you."

"I wonder if she really loves him, I'm sorry for it. I don't believe it means it. I shouldn't be surprised to hear that he was a married man with a family—you never best him talk of his people in Australia. Whenever any of us neglects our duty to our country, it leads us to us what kind of life he leads out there."

She got up from the grass, brushed herself with her hands, buttoned his coat, and walked sharply towards the Manor House. "When he had got half way across the lawn, Edline stepped forward and distance in front of him—she was a man and a girl—she was dressed in white and her hair was pinned up tight. It was Edline and Fanshawe."

"What looked up from her work. "What about Marco?" she asked. "Is this a thing of the past? Has she quite forgotten him?"

JAPS COMMIT SUICIDE. HARA-KIRI OF SHIPS INSPIRES ARMY AND NAVY. Soldiers Carry 'No Surrender' Oath That 'No Soldier Will Capitulate.'

So far as foreigners are aware, took place a little over thirty years ago, when a Samurai of the name of Zenaburo atoned in this manner, by the order of the mikado, for an armed attack upon members of the British legation. The ceremony took place in the presence of Sir Ernest Sartou, now English envoy at Peking, and Lord Rossmore, to whom Zenaburo's head was presented for inspection by his karaku, or best friend, who had decapitated him at the moment when he had completed his disemboweling process.

So far as the Japanese are concerned, it is the honor of the country that is at stake. The Japanese are proud of their military character, and have assumed that the Muscovite troops were granting quarter, and proceeded to denounce their methods of warfare as barbarous. This is an unjust charge.

Insults were exchanged, and the Japanese, who had been ordered to denounce their methods of warfare as barbarous, were infuriated. The Japanese are proud of their military character, and have assumed that the Muscovite troops were granting quarter, and proceeded to denounce their methods of warfare as barbarous.

INSULTS OF MONEY. "Veterinary surgeons say that a half cent of all cows have become infected with this disease, and are being slaughtered by the thousands." The Japanese transport Kinsu Maru on April 23 of the Korean coast, was attacked by the British torpedo boat, and the vessel was sunk.

About the House

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

Topaz Bread—One pint of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, one cup of molasses, one cup of Indian meal, two cups of flour, one cup finely cut citron. Flour to roll soft. They should be two weeks old before using to be eaten hot.

Criddle Cakes—One cup of flour, one half cup sugar, one cup butter, one half cup raisins, one cup currants, one cup finely cut citron. Flour to roll soft. They should be two weeks old before using to be eaten hot.

Sugar Puffs—Take the whites of ten eggs, beat them till they rise to a stiff foam, add a stone marble or wooden bowl, add as much double refined sugar as will make thick, put in a little tannin, to give them color, flavor, rub them round the mortar for half an hour, put in a few caraway seeds, take a sheet of wax paper, lay them out as broad as a sixpence, and as high as they can be laid, put them under a moderate oven half quarter of an hour, and they will look like puff balls.

INGOTS OF SILVER. A London police inspector thought that he had fallen into a piece of rare good luck the other day, and was just about to retire from the force to a home on the Thames. He was looking over Westminster Bridge at low tide when he saw some shining objects on the concrete foundations of the pillars. These proved to be ingots of silver.

BURIED HIS TREASURE. John Whittaker, 92 Chesterford Road, Montpelier, Bristol, England, is thankful for his lucky stars for the recovery of a sum of money that had buried in South Africa. He was a member of the Grahamstown, had about £66, the remains of a legacy from an aunt. He was not disposed to spend the money, but to deposit it in a bank, so he buried it in Huntley street of that place.

THE SHIP'S MASTER. An Old Norwegian Pilot and First-per William. It is a just and wholesome rule that a captain shall command his own ship, no matter what is on board. If he has the sense and spirit to enforce his authority, there is the less chance of disaster from pompous meddling. Here is a story of Emperor William which may or may not be true—probably it is not.

DOCTOR'S GOOD FORTUNE. The story of a young physician of name comes from England. The young man soon after he had begun practice attended an eccentric gentleman who spent nearly all of his time in the garden of his residence in one of the suburbs of London. After the old fellow's death the doctor secured his late residence as being well suited for a medical practitioner. Recalling the old gentleman, he thought he might not be forgotten, the doctor planted with his own hands a sapling in a corner of the garden, where the late owner had often sat.

When excavating a place for the road, the doctor discovered a box containing 500 sovereigns. The last of these judicial suicides.
