STEAMERS NORTHLAND AND CORONA ARRIVED AT HALIFAX

Brought Many Officers and Men from Overseas—Special Train With New Brunswick Heroes Arrived Here Yesterday Morning—Made Fast Time from Moncton—
Complete List of N. B. Boys.

About two hundred New Brunswick men arrived in the city yesterday morning by special train from Halifax, having reached that port on the steamers Northland and Corona. They were met at the depot by Charles Robinson, secretary of the New Brunswick Returned Soldiers Aid Commission, the Citizens' Reception Committee and the Band. Owing to the train making especially fast time from Moncton, the reception committee and band were a little late arriving at the station, but the warmth of the welcome more than made up for the slight delay.

The St. John boys were allowed to proceed at once to their homes, the others formed up and, headed by the band, marched to the army, where they were given their discharge. The Moncton men left last night in a special car attached to the freight, and the rest of the men will leave this morning; the men for Campbellton and points north left at 7.10, and those for Woodstock and points west at 7.40.

The special made exceptionally fast time from Moncton. She left there at 7.40 a.m. daylight time, and arrived in the city at 9.45 daylight time, making the run in two hours and five minutes.

Among those who arrived was Captain T. C. Creaghan, of Newcastle, son of J. D. Creaghan, who has the proud record of being the father of four sons and two daughters who have seen service at the front, and was himself one of the leading workers in all patriotic work in the province, and Nursing Sister Nellie Donahoe, of 121 Princess street. Following is the list of men who arrived yesterday, as supplied to Charles Robinson, secretary of the N. B. Returned Soldiers' Commission:

AN ATLANTIC UPPER AIR INVESTIGATION EXPEDITION

Lieut. Guy Harris Arrived on S. S. Montcalm Yesterday—
Made Successful Investigations During Voyage for the British Air Ministry—Used Monster Kites for Scientific Flying for Purpose of Making Chart of Air Current.

In future days when one takes a casual flight across the Atlantic in a Detroit flying river the success of the trip can be credited to the British Air Ministry in general, the expedition which, under the command of Lieut. Guy Harris, F. R. M. S., R. A. F., specially.

Lieut. Harris arrived in the city yesterday, a passenger, and the only one on board the C. P. ship Montcalm. He is the commander of the Atlantic upper air investigation expedition which, under the command of the Royal Air Ministry, will chart every air current and make the air route across the Atlantic as sure and safe as the waterway.

Scientific Kite-Flying.
Yesterday a representative of The Standard visited the vessel and examined the special apparatus with which she was fitted for the expedition. At first sight it seems to be simple enough, for it consists only of winches, wire, box kites, and a meteorograph, but the meteorograph is itself a complicated and intricate instrument, and kite-flying for scientific purposes is not quite the school-boy fun that many people imagine it to be.

The kites used are of three types, and the larger of these which measures roughly 8 ft. by 6 ft., exerts a pull in a strong wind sufficient to strain the holding power of four men. Besides the box kite, there is a crown kite, 16 feet long and 12 feet high, with a main plane and two smaller planes, and a "tail" kite, used mostly as a pilot kite to assist the others up.

There are two winches, one placed on the fore-deck for use when the wind is aft, and the other for use when the wind is ahead or abeam, is to be sent off on the gun platform in the stern of the ship. By these means the mooring cables which are of fine steel wire very similar to marine sounding cable will be kept clear of rigging and derricks whatever may be the angle from the ship at which the kite is flying.
