WE ARE THREE BIG REFORMERS. A NEW SONG-Tune, "THE ROGUE'S MARCH." The following is a street ballad now sung on the streets of Montreal, and which has not yet been published. As representing the spirit of the times, we give it room, though the poet has not seen fit to sign his name to the effusion.

A tall "Young" mar, guess him who can, His name bedecked with honours ecame a prey, the people sav.

To Three Great Big 'Reformers." A naughty thief, addressed him brief He spurne I such gross dishonour

But he met Three Big Reformers T'was E. G. P., and A. A. D., And that arch elf of "order

His first belief was " Catch the Thief"

Who said, "Young" man, just hear our plan We are Three Big Reformers. Though dark and deep, the crime to keep, Or break a seal, pon honour, That code's the "Blues," but we're the Rogue, We are Three Big Reformers.

To break a seal, to lie or steal, Or turn such nice sharp corners, Would be quite wrong if Big Sir John Was booked with Pig Reformers. But 'gainst that foe, crime high or low, Our conscience, ne'er refuses, And L. H. fl., sure don't he pre: (1)

This doctrine of the "Rouge The Witnes: too, those righteous few Of Sunday order jealous

Puffs up our cause, and Sabbath laws
With it's neek pious Bellows. Of Sunday order jeal

Then tall "young" man, just hear our plan We'll break that seal of honour, Our Pious Friend, will sure defend

Our cause, Three Big Reformers. "GRINCHUCKLE." NOTES AND NEWS.

ENGLISH: ENGLIS

About six months ago the celebrated Irish giant, Ned O'Baldwin, was arraigned delphia for knocking a man's eye out with a walking stick and jumping his ball and fied the city. Some time after he returned to town, engaged in some other personal encounter, was collared again and safely lodged behind strong doors. Saturday a trial was afforded him, and, after consultation, the jury returned a werdict, in consideration of which O.Baldwin was sentenced to prison for two years.

Hardly had having had his loaf placed in its original hiding place, the boy left. Hardly had he quitted the store when another lad rushed in exclaiming: "Do you know what that chap has done? he has prigged your watch." The grocer looked in horror, and saw his watch-chain dangling and his watch gone. "There he goes!" said his informant, pointing to a figure seen going down the street; and the storekeeper immediately rushed out in pursuit, leaving the store unguarded. When he had reached the corner the supposed thief had varished, and, returning to his store, he found that during his absence the informer had emptiled the till and gone off with the money. The two thleves have so far escaped capture.

Baltimore American describes one of the most mysterious works of art, now exhibiting in Paris, that has ever been withessed there. It is a diorama of the siege of Paris, and all Paris is running wild to view it. There is some species of optical illusion in connection with it that no one seems able to uncerstand. Although a painting, it so closely resembles nature that on suddenly entering a hall the spectator is bewildered, and invariablycomplains of dizziness as his eyescans the intervening scenes and the distant horizon presented to view. The building in which the diorama is exhibited is circular, and about 300 feet in diameter, with a glass dome. On entering it the Baltimore American describes one of the with a glass dome. On entering it the visitor passes along a rather dark passage to what seems the centre of the building, and then finds himself on a circular platform on the top of a veritable tance. By close examination it could be discovered that the nearer earthworks of the picture, and even some of the cannon, for a distance of fifty or sixty feet from the edge of the platform, is veritable earth and undoubted cannon, and real willow gabions and sand-bags, but the exact spot where the substantials ended exact spot where the substantials ended and the canvas began was not so easily detected. The whole seems to be a piece of legerdemain in art that has never been attempted before.
