Under-Currents

By The Duchess

Seaton Dysart's arrivals being only looked for by the girls at about seven o'clock in the evening—just an hour or so before dinner—gave them plenty of time to prepare for his coming. Any day on which he was expected Mrs. Grunch brought a formal message to Vera from her uncle to that effect. Never yet had their cousin come without the announcement being made, and to them his under- stood was it that he would not put in an unexpected appearance, that when after a rather longer absence than usual, an absence extending over all last week and part of this, he turns up at half-past two in the afternoon, his coming causes distinct embarrassment in several quarters.

"What's that?" says Griselda, starting, and dropping her fork (they are at their early dinner). "Did you hear it? A knock! A thundering knock!"

"Seaton's knock!" says Vera faintly changing colour.

"What can have brought him at this hour?" London must be reduced to ashes," hazards Griselda, her tone now as genial as usual. "For one instant a sickening fear that it might be Mr. Peyton's knock, had made her blood run cold. There had been a short but sharp one under between him and her the day before yesterday, and a wild fear that he had come up to have it out with her now, and here, had taken possession of her. At such a moment the advent of Seaton is hailed by her, at least with rapture.

"Why what happy drive you down at this hour?" cries she with the friendliest air, beaming on him as he comes into the room.

"It is good of you to call 'happy' says he, casting a really grateful look at her as he shakes hands cheerily with Vera. "In time for luncheon too, I see, though" with a rather surprised glance at the table, "you don't seem to be in a very hospitable mood. Nothing to spare eh? Peter get me something."

"Yes, sir," says that old fossil shuffling out. "If the room in a mighty hurry."

"We didn't know you were coming you see," says Griselda mildly. "That knowledge would have worked a miracle in this household. And it isn't lunch you see (or rather you don't see) before you, it is dinner."

"What?" says Seaton, flushing a dark red. He has got up from his seat, and is regarding her almost sternly. So is Vera, with a light in her eyes meant to strike Griselda into silence but that reckless person refuses to see it.

"Dinner?"

"Yes," says Griselda, returning her cousin's stern glance with the pleasantest little nod. "Have I said anything indiscreet?"

"Is it true?" asks Seaton, turning to Vera. It is a rather rude question, but there is so much shame and anxiety in his tone that Griselda forgives him.

"Why should it not be true?" says Vera, coldly, with a gravity that savours of disapproval. "As a rule we dine early."

"She means that we always dine early except when we know you are coming," supplements Griselda, even more mildly than before.

"And this—this," with a hurried glance at the scanty meal "do you mean to tell me that—that this is your dinner every day?"

"Literally," says Griselda cheerfully "this is the chop that changed not. It is not all that one could desire, of course, but it sometimes it might be altered for—"

"Griselda!" interrupts Vera rising to her feet.

"Why should I not speak?" asks Griselda in a meekly injured tone. "I was merely going to add that a fowl occasionally would be a good deal of moral use to us. I have always heard that to keep the temper in a healthy state change of food is necessary."

"I feel as if I ought to apologize to you for all this," says Dysart with a heavy sigh, addressing Vera, exclusively, "and as it, too, no apology could be accepted. But I shall see that it does not occur again."

"I beg you will do nothing," says Vera quickly. "Nothing. I will not have my uncle spoken to on this subject. Griselda is only in jest; she speaks like a foolish child. I'll folding her hands tightly together. "I forbid you to say anything about it."

"I regret that I must disobey you," says Seaton courteously but with determination. "My father's house is in part mine, and I will suffer no guest to endure discomfort in it."

"There is no discomfort now. There will be if you try to alter matters in our favour."

"You mean that you will accept nothing at my hands is that it?" exclaims he, passion that will not be repressed in his tone; the coldness seems broken up; there is fire in his eyes and a distinct anger. "You have had that 'time' you spoke of; has it fulfilled its mission has it taught you to detest me? No! detaining her deliberately as she seeks to leave the room, "don't go, you should give me a real reason for your studied discourtesy, for I won't believe that I am naturally abhorrent to you. There must be something else."

"If you must know," says she, looking back defiantly at him, her blood a little hot "you are too like your father for me to pretend friendship with you."

"Oh, Vera, I think you shouldn't say that!" cries Griselda, now honestly frightened at the store she has raised, but neither of the others hears her. Vera with one little slender white hand grasping the back of her chair near her is looking fixedly at Seaton, whose face has changed. An expression of keen pain crosses it.

"I as he been so bad to you as that?" he says, and then, with a profound sigh, "My poor father!"

There is something so honestly grieved in his whole air that Vera's heart smites her.

Look and Feel
Clean, Sweet and
Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.
