legal title to the property,

Captain Joseph Foster has a farm for sale of eighty acres forty acres of which is under excellent firewood. He will not sell the wood nor wooded part alone. He asks seven hundred dollars for the property.

Though not adjoining it is quite near the reserve and would be convenient for the Indians. At present this is the most favorable proposition in sight. The wood will last for a long period of years and the land can be used by the Indians for agriculture as they have none too much arable land
