"Poor old Philo," I said, comfortingly; "good dog. Chickens soon go away."

But they didn't go, nor did they show the least inclination to go. "Perhaps," I thought, "perhaps they will go when their feeding-time comes round."

But they were far too happy and contented to be hungry. Indeed, it was this making themselves so much at home in my room that made me speak seriously to them. I am usually patient and good-tempered, but the sight of those chickens, dressing their downy feathers and carrying on their private conversations, was more than my patience could bear. They had no consideration for either Philo or me. They paid us no respect, nor were they afraid of us, and how it is possible for big things the little things act in a becoming way, by being respectful and timid, I don't know.

"Chickens," I said, in a tone of firmness, "this is more than a joke. I like a bit of fun as well as anybody, but this invasion of my room — my Englishman's castle—is not fun, but downright impudence. I should be very sorry to make an unfair use of my great strength, or of my dog's sharp teeth, but I shall be compelled to do so unless you begin to make a move."

I expected this speech would have sent the chickens helter-skelter out of the room, but I did not understand the persistent nature of the race.

All it did was to make one of the chickens on the chickens of the chickens on the chickens on the chickens of the chickens on the chickens on the chickens of the chi table stretch itself to its full height and give a tiny crow of defiance.

A crisis was approaching.

"Philo," I said, "growl." He did so, making a rumbling noise like distant thunder.

The chickens paused from their various occupations, but only for an instant.

"Philo," I said, "Show your teeth."

He showed them, all of them, making a snapping noise to add to the effect. But the only effect it had on the chickens was to make them applaud the performance by stamping their feet. One of them, excited by the exhibition, jumped off the mantelpiece on to the crown of my head, making tion secure by digging its claws into my hear. "Chickens," I said solemnly, "prepare It is a pity to spoil my new carpet with you but it shall never be said that Theophile. shrank from doing his duty from carpet co ations. No one can say that-

Hon. John Dryden, Brooklin, Ont., writes:
"The demand for Shropshires has been unusual! brisk this season. I have sold my entire lot of 35 yearlings and a large number of lambs."

The Aberdeen-Angus herd of Walter Hall, Washington, Ont., has made itself a record this season that shows it to be one of the strongest in Canada. Mr. Hall writes that the herd prize victory at Ottawa makes the sixth successive 1st herd premium. Our Toronto Industrial report incorrectly stated that they won 2nd at that show.

that they won 2nd at that show.

It should be remembered in all dairy-cowkeeping that the maintenance ration for an inferior cow costs just as much as for one able to produce a large quantity of butter. It is, therefore, wise to keep only such animals as will respond well in yield of butter to the extra food given her over what her system requires. When one has a number of well-bred, good producers, he can usually raise good daughters from them, but that is a slow way to get a few animals. W. C. Shearer, of Bright, offers in this issue a number of high-testing Jerseys, just at the age for work. Persons wanting family cows now have a rare chance to secure them.

NOTICES.

There is advertised in this issue a farm for There is advertised in this issue a farm for sale by auction. It is not only situated in one of the indisputably best townships in Ontario Province, but is one of the best farms in that district. It is one one niently situated, and well-equipped with buildings, fences, drains, etc.; in fact, it is a very desirable property. See the advertisement of C. D. Reesor, Cedar Grove, Ont., elsewhere in this issue.

The Page Wire Fence Co., of Walkerville, Ont., have issued a handsomely illustrated catalogue, or, rather, album, showing sketches of their coiled spring woven-wire fencing erected in various situations. It also describes and gives the cost per rod of fences of various heights and of various numbers of bars. The book will help fence builders. A card to the company will secure one.

The Folding Sawing Machine Co., of South Clinton Street, Chicago, who have been long-time advertisers in the FARMER'S ADVOCATE, make their trade announcement in this issue for the opening of the season of 1898-9. While we are always glad and anxious to secure new advertisers, it affords us more than the usual amount of pleasure to know that we merit and receive the continued support of our old patrons. As the Folding Sawing Machine Co. have found this papera paying investment, as is indicated by their renewed support, we have found them thoroughly reliable business men and manufacturers of a useful and honest article. We can recommend them to our readers as thoroughly responsible and strictly honest in all their dealings. honest in all their dealings.

The aunouncement circular of the Kingston Business College for the season just opening is at hand. It shows that that institution, which has already won for itself an enviable reputation, aims to instruct along practical lines, giving boys and girls, men and women, a knowledge of the subjects they will be most likely to use in after life. They have recently added to their already strong staff Mr. H. F. Metcalfe, Expert Accountant and Public Auditor. Their courses of study are Commercial or Business, Shorthand, English and Civil Service. each of which are competently dealt with. Every farmer's son is the better for having some business training, as it does not require much time nor money, and its advantages are incalculable. THE SUCCESS OF THE BLOWER IN SILO-FILLING.

Mr. D. Thom, Manager of the Thom Implement Works, Watford, Ont., writes us as follows: "As much has been said in condemnation of the blower style of elevator ensilage cutters, and as I know many farmers are interested and would like to get at the truth regading the merits of this invention, for the past four or five years I have given this style of machine careful study, and to-day I claim that I have completely mastered every difficulty standing in the way of success, and I will undertake to elevate green corn at the rate of 12 tons per hour if necessary. We have filled over 200 silos this season, so I am not rate of 12 tons per hour if necessary. We have filled over 200 silos this season, so I am not afraid of successful contradiction, and, furthermore, we can do the work at a less speed than 600 revolutions per minute.
