MYSTERIOUS RAIDER "MOEWE" Speaking commenced, while the 125th band, as usual, played selections in bendid sytle. On the platform were Mr. Joseph H. Ham, M.P.P., Lt. Col. Cutcliffe, Corp. Bethune, Hon. Lt. Col' W. F. Cockshult, M.P., Rev. Mr. McKegney, Dr. James L. Hughes, Mr. Norman Andrews, Ex-Mayor Spence, Acting Mayor Dowling. MR. McKEGNEY. HAS AVOIDED BRITISH SHIPS

After Sinking 15 Ships and Laying Mayor Dowling.

Me had been holding back waiting for others to go, but we should dismiss from our minds all such thoughts, said Mr. McKegney. The British Empire had believed truth and honor of more value than commerce or money or even life itself. The war had made us better; had taught us the things that mattered. It we did not grasp this opportunity to serve we would not be worthy the name of Britishers.

Mayor Dowling.

MR McKegney.

We had been holding back waiting for others to go, but we should dismiss from our minds all such thoughts, said Mr. McKegney. The British Empire had believed truth and honor of more value than commerce or money or even life itself. The war had made us better; had thousands of boys. School boys would be better for workled would have more power spirit-thoughts, said Mr. McKegney. The country should be organized. There were hundreds of women in Brantford who could be trained to do the work of men in the stores. "If I lived in Brantford I would not buy an article from a store that had a young man employed in it." There were hundreds of old men, and hundreds of women who could take the place of men in factories, even in

He advocated much greater organization, organization as he stated it, for recruits, for production and for thrift. Retired farmers and old men and boys should work on the farms, and women too, as well as in store and shop and factory. Not a man of eligible age and fit to serve, should be left out of the fighting ranks. Until organization was bent to that end, the men would not respond readily. Corpora Bethune spoke entertainingly of his life at the front. Rev. Mr. McKegney presided in the uniform of a lieutenant in his Majesty's forces. Then some women said, "I love my boy too much to let him go." That was an impudent statement. Did not the women who had kin among the 280,000 soldiers enlisted also love theirs just as much.

Then again people say they will fight if the Germans dare to come into Canada. "I would just as soon have a flock of sheep," asserted the speaker. The place to beat the Germans was abroad. We had the choice of fighting Germany in Flanders or fighting them on our own soil. Dr. Hughes said it was neither good patriotism nor good sense to tell a man he was just as useful on
