BLOCKADE OF GERMANY NOW INTENSIFIED

Blockade One of Most Important Weapons in Hands of Allies

HUNS FEEL PINCH
Entry of U.S. Has Enabled Britain to Employ New Devices

London, April 15.—Correspondence of The Associated Press—"The blockade is one of the most important weapons in the hands of the Allies," asserts the British War Cabinet. Dealing with the development and amplification of the blockade of Germany during 1917, the cabinet says in its annual report just made public:

"The chief method by which this amplification has been effected has been the conclusion of a series of agreements with neutral shipping companies. The weapon in the background during such negotiations has been the British control of bunker facilities and the powers wielded by the Inter-Allied Chartering Committee.

"A very considerable amount of success can fairly be claimed for the policy. In the Far East, the German commercial establishments have been almost completely destroyed and recent events will probably make it possible to complete the work.

"Thanks to our agreements with American shipping companies, the financial stability of enemy firms in South America has been very generally shaken, and in some cases they have been forced into liquidation. In other instances, firms containing certain enemy interests have been obliged to eliminate this interest.

"In Spain the policy has worked admirably and is considered to have gone far to counteract the more insidious methods of German propaganda. In all countries the moral effect of the Statutory List has been very pronounced, and a definite stigma is attached to inclusion in the list, an effect which has been accentuated by the growing dislike of the world in general for German objects and methods."

The main preoccupation of the Ministry of Blockade during the year 1917, it is stated, was directed to diminishing trade between the Germans and neutrals on her behalf.

"The neutral tonnage employed in Allied trade increased by a million tons between the United States and Germany, followed by similar declarations from, or the rupture of relations with, a considerable number of South American States. This has enabled us and our Allies to stop ports to the border neutrals at the source.

"Public attention has been fixed, not unnaturally, more upon the food blockade of Germany than anything else, but it is very doubtful whether this is its most important aspect. The evidence is strong to show that Germany is also suffering gravely from the want of such things as wool, leather, cotton, rubber and so on.

"It is hoped that we may see considerable results in the future from the new forms of pressure which the entry of America into the war has enabled us to employ."
