

Bangor Does Honor to King Edward VII.

Writing in the London News as a recent issue Mr. A. G. Hales gives the following description of the electrical display made by the vessels of the British squadron which escorted the King and Queen to Bangor, Ireland.

more grim and grey on the lap of the waters. All was darkness profound. Above no star glimmered; below no flash was on the waters; darkness claimed her own, until, without warning of bugle, or beat of drum, or call of file, the Royal yacht sprang into splendor, the only brilliant thing amidst the darkness.

A manly, fearless breed, with a touch of the shore and a taste of the sea in their looks and manners; and the women are better than the men, for they have the touch of the sea in their wavy hair and a taste of the skies in their big blue eyes.

Above us the clouds lower heavily, black with a promise of rain. Midway between the shingly beach and the wash of the sea the King and Queen are resting after the labors of the day. The yacht is too big to be called a thing of beauty as yachts go, yet she seems perfect in her parts as she lies there half-shrouded in shadow.

The clouds above us deepen into impenetrable blackness, and the waters of the bay, under the moon star, look dark, forbidding and uncanny. Then all at once the scene is changed. The Admiral's ship leaps into flame, a thousand lights come into being in a blaze of splendor. Like stars in a southern sky the lamps gleam and glister blue-white against the blackness.

Then far and wide the gorgeous beacons fly. Her spars are lit with flame, her decks shine like molten brass, every man on her is silhouetted against the forbidding blackness of the night. Behind him, as plainly as though carved out of marble, flushed with fire, every rope, every bit of brasswork is patent to the eye. It is a picture glowing in the heart of the night. The ship had been ugly, a cold, grey, silent monster; now she lives, a thing to touch a poet's soul.

The right and left the speedy signals flew, and in the twinkling of an eye the darkness faded and the world of waters sparkled with light. Far as the astounded eye could reach great warships blazed a mass of brilliant lights, and yet over all the black clouds hovered ominously, dropping lower and lower like a mantle that would envelop them all; and the waters scarcely less black, seemed to rise to meet the blackness overhead, whilst the great blazing, brilliant fleet lay in between—a thing of wonder and of power, the sign manual of Britain's greatness.

On shore all is jollity, gaiety and merriment. The dance music comes up the bright eyes of fair women swaying to and fro on the arms of stalwart men, for they are a breed of stalwarts, those Bangor folk.

On the sea the music of the waves is heard, and the sea is a sea of music. The music of the waves is heard, and the sea is a sea of music. The music of the waves is heard, and the sea is a sea of music.

Amiable man, that 'ere, Sammy," said Mr. Weller, smoking violently. "Seem so," observed Sam. "Good hand at accounts," said Mr. Weller.

"Well," said the doctor, "how do you feel to-day?" "Oh, doctor," replied the patient wearily, "I am suffering the torments of the damned."

He was wholly bad—the world had called him such, and long ago had left him to his evil ways. But yesterday I saw him where the last rays of the setting sun fell upon his uncouth form.

As they had greeted him, I saw an instant's light o'erspread his face, as if his soul were conversing with some holy thing. His lips were parted with the raptness of exquisite life.

Light o'erspread his face, as if his soul were conversing with some holy thing. His lips were parted with the raptness of exquisite life. His head and looked upon the fair things of the earth. He carefully avoided stepping on a worm. He responded to the lower forms of life with fearlessness.

GRANTON MAN SPEAKS OUT

To Let the Public Know Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him

John Fletcher had Lumbago and Kidney Disease and Could Get no Relief Till He Tried the Great Kidney Remedy.

Granton, Ont., Aug. 31.—(Special)—"I am glad to let the public know that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Lumbago, and I am now perfectly sound."

These are the words of John Fletcher, a well-known resident of this village, and similar tributes to the great Canadian Kidney remedy can be heard on every side.

"I had been troubled for a year with Lumbago and Kidney troubles," Mr. Fletcher continued, when asked for particulars. "My urine was of a very bad color and I could get nothing to help me. I consulted the best doctors in Granton and St. Mary's, but got no relief. Finally I bought a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and commenced taking them. They helped me almost from the first, and I was soon completely cured."

It is cures of this kind that have given Dodd's Kidney Pills their popularity. You can find a neighborhood in Canada where Dodd's Kidney Pills are not known by their cures.

I wonder if everybody on earth who writes with a steel pen knows how to make it take up the ink at the first dip? The polish or varnish on the new pen prevents the ink from adhering. Now, if you will hold the new pen in the flame of a match for a little while and melt the varnish off, it will write quite as well as an old pen and the ink will not drip off. Try it. It is a very old trick.

THE PRINTER'S BOY WAS DEVOTED TO THE MINISTER'S DAUGHTER, and she finally prevailed upon him to go to the church. Whether her father knew of their coming is not definitely settled, but there is evidence that he did, for he gave out as his text, "My daughter is grievously tormented with a devil."

WASH DAY WORST.

Laborers May be Lightened if System is Used.

Washing day is justly dreaded in the heat of summer, when all work is a double burden to the flesh. Anything that lightens the work is therefore especially welcome, but though the tools of to-day are superior to those of our grandmothers, modern invention has done comparatively little to lighten the labors of the laundry. In spite of the cost of washing machines and the representations of their agents, a perforated zinc rubbing board is still the most useful tool that a good laundress can command.

One of the most important parts of washing is the sorting of the clothes. There are many stains which like those of perspiration, disappear magic-like, and others, like furit and coffee, which must be treated with boiling water, but are removed, set by lukewarm water. If it is the practice of the family to soak all the clothes in cold water before the washing has begun, a great many garments will be permanently set; but the various kinds of stains are carefully sorted out and properly treated, hours of rubbing will be saved.

A housekeeper whose clothes always look as white as snow, she says that it is best to soak coarse clothes in cold water, but the table linens and fine clothes need not be so treated. The same housekeeper says that as soon as she has removed the stains from her clothes she puts them in cold water in the boiler, and brings them to the boiling point, and then puts them in the washbasin to be rubbed for the first time.

"Command of the Sea." (New York Herald.)

The British manoeuvres now under way in eastern Atlantic waters are based upon a strategic idea of great importance. Compared with the earliest, but somewhat restricted efforts we are exerting on the Maine coast, these British manoeuvres look large. In addition to the major operations, two forces of destroyers and torpedo boats, 61 of the first and 37 of the latter, together with 19 other sea-going auxiliaries are engaged in manoeuvres off the Irish coast. More than two hundred fighting ships are being employed in these experiments.
