NO PATENT, NO PAY. PATENTS

obtained for mechanical devices, medicinal or other compounds, ornamental designs, trade-marks and labels. Grants, Assignments, Interferences, Infringements and all matters relating to Patents, promptly attended to. We make preliminary examinations and furnish opinions as to patentability, free of charge and all who are interested in new inventions and Patents are invited to send for a copy of our "Guide for obtaining Patents," which is sent free to any address, and contains complete instructions how to obtain Patents, and other valuable matter. During the past five years we have obtained nearly three thousand Patents for American and Foreign inventors, and can give satisfactory references in almost every country in the Union.

Spheroidal Spectacles AND EYE GLASSES

ARE the best for the preservation of the sight, and took the medal at the Centennial Exhibition.

The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect polish and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer.

The eye being the most delicate organ great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately.

To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Ophthalmometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed.

Call and examine before purchasing any other kind.

"But it was a sacrifice which Heaven exacted to save our lives," answered Rebecca, "and the God of our fathers has since blessed your store and your gettings."

"Ay," answered Isaac, "but if the tyrant lay hold on them as he had today, and compels me to smile when he is robbing me? O, daughter, disinherited and wanderings as we are, the worst evil which befalls our race is, that when we are wronged and plundered, all the world laughs around, and we are compelled to suppress our sense of injury, and to smile tamely, when we would revenge bravely."

"Think not thus of it, my father," said Rebecca; "we also have advantages. These Gentiles, cruel and oppressive as they are, are in some sort dependent on the dispersed children of Zion, whom they despise and persecute. Without the aid of our wealth, they could neither furnish forth their hosts in war, nor their triumphs in peace; and the gold which we lend them returns with increase to our coffers. We are like the herb which flourishes most when it is most trampled on. Even this day's payment had not proceeded without the consent of the despised Jew, who furnished the means."

"Daughter," said Isaac, "thou hast harped upon an other string of sorrow. The goodly steed and the rich armor, equal to the full profit of my adventure with our Kirjath Jairam of Leicester—there is a dread loss too—aye, a loss which swallows up the gains of a week; aye, of the space between two Sabbaths—and yet it may end better than I now think, for 'tis a good youth."

"Assuredly," said Rebecca, "you shall not repent you of requiting the good received of the stranger knight."

"I trust so, daughter," said Isaac. "and I trust too in the rebuilding of Zion, but as well do I hope with my own bodily eyes to see the walls and battlements of the new Temple, as to see a Christian, yes, the very best of Christians, repay a debt to a Jew, unless under the awe of the judge and jailor."

So saying, he resumed his discontented walk through the apartment; and Rebecca, perceiving that her attempts at consolation only served to awaken new subjects of complaint, wisely desisted from her unavailing efforts—a prudential line of conduct, and we recommend to all who set up for comforters and advisers, to follow it in the like circumstances.

The evening was now becoming dark, when a Jewish servant entered the apartment, and placed upon the table two silver lamps, fed with perfumed oil; the richest wines and the most delicate refreshments were at the same time displayed by another Israelitish domestic on a small ebony table, inlaid with silver; for, in the interior of their houses, the Jews refused themselves no expensive indulgences.

At the same time the servant informed Isaac that a Nazarene (so they termed Christians while conversing among themselves) desired to speak with him. He that would live by traffic, must hold himself at the disposal of every one claiming business with him. Isaac at once replaced on the table the untasted glass of Greek wine which he had just raised to his lips, and saying hastily to his daughter, "Rebecca, wait thyself!" commanded the stranger to be admitted.

Just as Rebecca had dropped over her fine features a screen of silver gauze which reached to her feet, the door opened, and Gurth entered, wrapt in the ample folds of his Norman mantle. His appearance was rather suspicious than propitious, especially as, instead of doffing his bonnet, he pulled it still deeper over his rugged brow.

"Art thou Isaac the Jew of York?" said Gurth in Saxon.

"I am," replied Isaac, in the same language, (for his traffic had rendered every tongue spoken in Britain familiar to him)—"and who art thou?"

"That is not to the purpose," answered Gurth: "As much as my name is to thee," replied Isaac, "for without knowing thee, how can I hold intercourse with thee?"

"Easily," answered Gurth; "I, being to pay money, must know that I deliver it to the right person; thou, who art to receive it, will not, I think, care very greatly by whose hand it is delivered."

"O," said the Jew, "you are come to pay money? Holy Father Abraham! that altereth our relation to each other. And from whom dost thou bring it?"

"From the Disinherited Knight," said Gurth, "victor in this day's tournament. It is the price of the armor supplied to him by Kirjath Jairam, of Leicester, on thy recommendation. The steed is restored to the stable; I desire to know the amount of the sum which I am to pay for the armor."

"I said he was a good youth!" exclaimed Isaac, with joyful exultation. "A cup of wine will do thee no harm," he added, filling and handing to the swiftest the richest draught that Gurth had ever before tasted. "And how much money?" continued Isaac, "hast thou brought with thee?"

"Holy Virgin!" said Gurth, setting down to the cup, "what nectar thou believest dogs drink, while true Christians are fain to quaff ale as muddy and thick as the draft we give to hogs! What mo'er have I brought with me?" continued the Saxon, when he had finished this uncivil ejaculation, "even but a small sum; something in hand the whilst. What, Isaac! thou must bear a conscience, though it be a Jewish one."

"Nay, but," said Isaac, "thy master has won goodly steeds and rich armors with the strength of his lance, and of his right hand—but 'tis a good youth—the Jew will take these in present payment, and render him back the surplus."

"My master has dis-posed of them already," said Gurth.

"What! art thou strong?" said the Jew, "that wilt part of a fool? No Christian here could buy so many horses and armor—no Jew except myself would give in to the values. But thou hast a hundred zeichins with thee in that bag," said Isaac, prying under Gurth's cloak; "it is a heavy one."

"I have leads for cross-bows in it," said Gurth, readily.

"Well, then," said Isaac, pausing and hesitating between habitual love of gain and a new-born desire to be liberal in the present instance, "I should say that I would take eighty zeichins for the good steed and the rich armor, which leaves me not a guilder's profit, have you money to pay me?"

"Barely," said Gurth, though the sum demanded was more reasonable than he expected, "and it will leave my master nigh penniless. Nevertheless, if such be your least offer, I must be content."

"But thyself another goblet of wine," said the Jew. "Altho' eighty zeichins is too little, it leaveth me no profit for the usage of the money and, besides, the good horse may have suffered wrong in this day's encounter. O, it was a good and a dangerous animal; man and steed rushing on each other like wild bulls of Basian! The horse cannot but have had wrong."

"And I say," replied Gurth, "he is sound, wind and limb; and you may see him at my stable. And I say, over and above seventy zeichins enough for the armor, and I hope a Christian's word is as good as a Jew's. If you will not take seventy, I will carry this bag" (and he shook it till the contents jingled) "back to my master."

"Nay, nay!" said Isaac; "lay down the talents—the shekels—the ounces—consider thee liberally." Gurth at length complied; and I telling out eighty zeichins upon the table, the Jew delivered out to him an acceptance for the horse and suit of armor. The Jew's hand trembled for joy as he wrapped up the first seventy pieces of gold. The last ten he delivered with much deliberation, pausing, and saying so-and-so as he took each piece from the table, and dropped it into his purse. It seemed as if his avarice were struggling with his better nature, and compelling him to parcel zeichins after zeichins, while his generosity urged him to restore some part at least to his benefactor, or as a donation to his agent. His whole speech ran nearly thus:

"Seventy—no—seventy-two; thy master is a good youth—seventy-three, an excellent youth—seventy-four—that piece hath been clipped from the ring—seventy-five—and that looketh light of weight—seventy-six—when thy master wants money, let him come to Isaac of York—seventy-seven—that is, with reasonable security." Here he made a considerable pause, and Gurth had good hope that the last three pieces might escape the fate of their comrades; but the enumeration proceeded; "Seventy-eight—thru art a good fellow—seventy-nine—and deservest something for thyself—"

Here the Jew paused again, and looked at the last zeichin, intending to bestow it on Gurth. He weighed it upon the tip of his finger, and made it ring by dropping it upon the table. Had it rung too flat, or had it felt a hair's breadth too light, generosity had carried the day; but unhappily for Gurth, the same was full and true, the zeichin plump, newly coined, and a grain above weight. Isaac could not find it in his heart to part with it, so he dropped it into his purse as if in absence of mind, with the aid of his right hand; he would reward thee henceforward. "Surely," he added, looking earnestly at the bag, "thou hast more coins in that pouch!"
