THE TEMPER.

The temper is a combustible sub stance which at times combusts with great fury and produces homicide. divorce suits, black eyes and contusions on the masculine headpiece. Many a trustful, unsuspecting married man has been set upon by a high temper and covered with deep, aching dents which had to be attributed to being tripped up by the coal hod. Life is full of such self-sacrifices as this, and yet wherever he goes the amrried man is reviled and maligned and labeled as a crass, calfbound loke.

Temper in children should be exracted as early as possible with a

There are two kinds of temperweet and sour. The former of these two is preferred, as it does not shater so many pre-nuptial dreams or se-glasses. A sweet temper is more seful in the average home than the self-dumping flour bin. If bridegrooms would look more at the temer of a tall, muscular fiancee and less at the real estate owned by her father there would be fewer husbands carrying a furtive look and a split lip. A real sweet temper never has an off lay, and is invaluable in ironing out he rough spots and smoothing the fur a husband who comes home with his back arched like a pussy cat.
