"THEY PROBABLY WEREN'T"

"I don't see how anyone could be so utterly mean and hateful without any justification at all," flashed Molly. A young friend of hers had been telling of her trials with her mother-in-law. It seemed that the latter who was living with them would not speak to the wife except through the husband, addressed all her remarks to him and kept a dead silence when the two were alone. Besides that she had told the husband several things that were not true about the wife, and also utterly refused to do her share of the work. "Why once when the wife was sick, she went away to a convention and left her alone all day. And yet Jane has been lovely to her, gave her the nicest room in the house, helped her make her dresses and everything."

Molly On the Rampage.
Molly had been telling us all this with indignation in voice and eye, and ended up with the above expression of her inability to comprehend "how anyone could be so utterly mean and hateful without any justification at all."

Whereat, the lady who-always-somehow replied in a tone that somehow arrested Molly's attention in this direction of that perfect understanding and forgiveness.

"No, I can't either." "What do you mean by that?" said Molly uncertainly, "because if you

People Who Live in Slums

What is a slum? Is a slum a section of a city people live in because circumstances prevent their bettering their living conditions, or do they reside in such places because it is their wish? There is a lot of sentiment spilled over slums and slum conditions, but how many of the thousands of people who reside in such districts ever attempt to take advantage of themselves by living in what many of us would consider more congenial neighborhoods. In these days of cheap land within easy reach of our large cities, and excellent transportation facilities, there is apparently no excuse for people living in Toronto's ward or Montreal's downtown tumble-down residential district, but still they keep on doing so. And they would probably be very much offended if it was suggested to these "denizens of the dumps" that they had better move to the outskirts of the city where pure air and sunshine are not at a discount. In looking over the matter dispassionately one must come to the conclusion that it is not the financial circumstances of these people that pens them to smelly, smoke-laden streets and smaller houses. Most of them are paying rents that if spent on the outskirts of a city would ensure comfortable homes, and if the spacious grounds at least sufficient to allow God's sunshine to penetrate on all sides. It is quite apparent that these people live in the slums because they like that sort of an existence. It is in no manner forced upon them. They apparently enjoy the noise, the rattle and the bang and the white lights near by, to say nothing of close contact with their neighbors. If people are to live in better than slum conditions they will have to be taught that the last word; either that or pull structures down and compel the move. In the meantime we are giving much sympathy where it is appreciated.

We Owe Something to Japan

In Japan's dark days it is well we should be reminded of the feeling expressed by that country in the years gone by. Upon occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the tower of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa on September 1919, by His Royal Highness Prince of Wales, the following of greeting came from the Japanese Government:
"The Japanese Government themselves of this opportunity tender hearty good wishes for the future welfare of Canada. All feel that the cornerstone of the buildings for the Canadian Parliament is being laid at an auspicious time. Peace and righteousness preside over their birth. Canada may rest assured that the Government and people of Japan who desire earnestly to operate with its inhabitants in ways possible for the greater good of humanity."
Canadians should require no reminder that they have a duty to perform. At best Japan is a country of poor people, and her recent history has been such as to be well nigh irreparable if left unaided. The thousands upon thousands of dead can be brought back to life, but it can be done to aid that nation's material sense. Japan did not hesitate to throw her weight into the fight between 1914 and 1918, we should hesitate at this time.

Which Position for Your Boy

BIRTHS
SMITH—At Blank Hospital, on June 30th, to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, a son (James W. Smith).

BIRTHS
EDWARDS—At Blank Hospital, on June 30th, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Edwards, a son (George Arthur).

Twenty Years Later

Mr. Smith, in his pride and happiness, buys his wife a diamond brooch to celebrate the birth of their son.

Mr. Edwards is not so well off as Mr. Smith—so with an eye to the future he invests in a Policy to protect his wife and boy.

No one cavils at a man buying his wife a gift when a son is born, but, in the long run, a Confederation Monthly Income Policy may prove to be by far the wiser investment. Think it over. Write for particulars.

PUTTING IT OFF.

The spendthrift always plans to save, some future time, when signs are right; like other men he has a craving for stacks of roubles, gleaming bright. "Next month," he sighs, "I'll draw my wages, and put a portion down in brine; or next approach by easy stages a reformation high and fine. Next month I'll quit this thing of blowing the mark, the kopeck and the franc, and citizens will see me going with wads of plunder to the bank. Month after month he keeps on planning to save a sample of his pay, and while he plans hard luck is coming ten thousand spendthrifts every day. They lose their jobs, succumb to sickness, and then their folly they confess; their pocketbooks have not the thickness required in times of deadly stress. The paupers who are vainly raving in yonder poorhouse by the mere, once bravely planned to do some saving next week, next month, perchance next year. To-day's the time to cut out spending, the hard earned coins in foolish ways; to-day's the proper time for ending the wasteful course that never pays. To-day's the time for every fellow to quit the habits formed of yore, and hand to the receiving teller some fifty cents, or even more.

Making Humans to Order

Los Angeles Times: Now the Professor of Eugenics is telling us that in a few hundred years there will be no such institution as the family. The race will be perpetuated under the direction of a board of scientists. Life will be a laboratory affair, with synthetic methods prevailing. If there is a shortage of 8-foot blondes in any section of the world, a call will be put into the propagation board and the laboratory incubator system will be invoked. This may make for efficiency, but we are proud to say that we will not be here when it happens. When they begin to make our statesmen with a vacuum tube and a blowpipe it is time we were in our shrouds.

How Mrs. Weller makes her oyster stew

1 small can Libby's Milk
2 small cups water
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon salt
pepper
1 qt. oysters.

Bring milk and water almost to boil; add butter, stirring all the time. Add oysters with their liquid and let cook until edges curl.

7½ teaspoons of butter fat in every 16 ounce can

Mrs. Weller makes her famous Oyster Stew with Libby's Milk

When Sunday night comes around, the family of Mrs. T. A. Weller of Danville, Va., always know that supper time will bring something of delicious interest.

Quite frequently it's oyster stew and then there is rejoicing. For Mrs. Weller's oyster stew is a favorite dish of her family and friends.

In making it, Mrs. Weller always uses Libby's Milk. She says it does not curdle as ordinary milk is so likely to do.

Then too, Libby's adds a richness of flavor and gives a smooth, creamy body very satisfying to appreciative appetites. It is a great enricher.

7½ teaspoons of butter fat in every can

In every 16 oz. can of Libby's Milk there are 7½ teaspoons of butter fat—that substance which gives to cream and butter their great food value and makes them such enrichers.

The reasons Libby's Milk is so rich in butter fat are, first of all, because it comes from herds selected by trained dairymen for the exceptional quality of milk. These herds are pastured in favored localities, where the meadows are thickly carpeted with grass and abundantly watered.

Right here in the heart of these famous dairy sections are our condenseries where we remove half the moisture from this milk, making it double rich.

Nothing is added to it; none of its food values are taken away. But that you may use it, and other women all over the country, we seal it in airtight cans and sterilize it.

So, you see, Libby's Milk is the finest cow's milk in the land, made double rich!

Use this double richness in YOUR cooking

Thousands of women have found what Libby's Milk adds to their cooking in richness and flavor. Try it in one of your favorite dishes; you will be delighted with the new quality of added richness.

Your grocer has Libby's Milk. Order a can, or better still, several, to have on hand, for once you have tried it, you will want to use it in all your milk cookery.
