ACHES AND PAINS

For Headache (whether Sick or Nerveus), Toothache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Pain and Weakness in the Back, Spine or Kidneys, Pain Around the Liver, Pleurisy, Swelling of the Joints and Pains of all kinds, the application of Radway's Ready Relief will afford immediate ease, and its continued use for a few days will effect a permanent cure.

SCIATICA.

Strong Testimony of Emigrant Commissioner the Hon. George Starr, as to the Power of Radway's Ready Relief in a Case of Sciatic Rheumatism.

Van Ness Place, New York.

Dr. Radway—With me your Ready Relief has worked wonders. For the last three years I have had frequent and severe attacks, sometimes extending from lumbar regions to my ankles, and at times to both lower limbs. During the time I have been afflicted I have tried almost all the remedies recommended by wise men and fools, hoping to find relief, but all proved to be failures.

I have tried various kinds of baths, manipulation, outward application of liniments too numerous to mention, and prescriptions of the mest eminent physicians, all of which failed to give me relief.

Last September, at the urgent request of a friend (who had been afflicted as myself), I was induced to try your remedy. I was then suffering fearfully with one of my old turns. To my surprise and delight the first application gave me ease, after bathing and rubbing the parts affected, leaving the limbs in a warm glow, created by the Ready Relief. In a short time the pain passed entirely away. Although I have slight periodical attacks, approaching a change of weather, I know now how to cure myself and feel quite master of the situation. Radway's Ready Relief is my friend. I never travel without a bottle in my valise. Yours truly, GEORGE STARR.

RHEUMATISM

I have been a sufferer from rheumatism for more than six months. I could not raise my hands to my head or put my hands behind me or even take off my own shirt. Before I had finished three-fourths of a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief I could use my arms as well as ever. You can see why I have such great faith in your Ready Relief. Yours truly, W. C. BAKER, your Ready Relief. Yours truly, Eoet and Shee Factory, 939 Julia st., New Orleans.

IMMEDIATE ASSISTANCE.

There are many complaints where immediate assistance is required to suspend and check diseased action. In cases of this kind R. R. Relief is an important and intallible assistant, in many cases curing the patient "before the doctor reaches the house." Croup, Diphtheria, Influenza, Cramps, Spasms, Burns, Scalds, Accidents, Bruises, Falls, Gunshot Wounds, Poisonous Bites of Dogs, Snakes, Stings of Insects, etc., etc. In a few moments the wonderful properties of the Ready Relief are exhibited and the disease arrested and exterminated before it is developed.

Dr. Radway—I take my pen in hand to inform you of the great cure effected by your medicines. Some time ago my husband was taken down with the grip and lung fever. It came on him with a chill in the night. It happened I had a supply of your medicine in the house at the time. I rubbed his chest and back with the Radway's Ready Relief. I gave him a teaspoonful ma little hot water to drink, to help warm and stimulate him, and in about half an hour three of the Radway's Pills. By the time the doctor came the next morning he was much better. The doctor wanted to know what I had been doing. I told him. He said that was good, that they were good medicines. Another case I had was with my little nephew who was staying with me. He was taken with croup. I rubbed his chest, throat and back with the Ready Relief, gave him doses about an hour apart, followed it by a dose of pills. By the next day he was running about all right. I have been using this medicine, with my family and my neighbors, for about thirty years, and never knew it to fail. I would feel greatly obliged to you to please forward me your book "False and True." You are at liberty to make use of this testimony as you may think proper.

Yours respectfully,

Yours respectfully, MRS. ELIZA DUNN,

Her only other crnament besides the boquet of bridal foses which she carried in her white-gloved hands, was a fine solitaire diamond—the gift of the groom—which fastened the soft lace at her throat.

A breath of delicious fragrance greeted Shirley as she stepped within the sacred place, where she was to be made a wife, and when she reached the chancel she wondered and was deeply touched to see that it had been most beautifully decorated with rare and costly flowers.

Everything was pure white and green; and what for a moment struck her as peculiar was that there were nothing but lilies mingled with the fresh, bright ferns and beautiful vines.

There was a wealth of great waxen

As her eyes fell upon this lovely tribute, Shirley felt a conscious thrill run through all her nerves, and she knew at once that Neil Wallace alone had adorned the place for her bridal.

Her intuitions were correct; for, at an earlier hour, the young man, together with a florist, had taken possession of the place and personally superintended the arrangement of everything; while his own hands alone had grouped, with tender care and reverent touch, the spotless flowers in the basket, which, though much larger, were the exact counterpart of the one he had server to the ever memorable battle for the life of his child.

Shirley thought, with starting tears, that nothing could have been more delicately thoughtful or beautiful, and a solemn joy thrilled her heart with the consciousness of possessing the friendship of a man so noble and true.

The service was short and impressive; and when at last the vows were uttered which made them husband and wife, the happy couple returned to the hospitable home of Mrs. Wilbur, who had prepared a dainty wedding breakfast in honor of the fair girl who had so endeared herself to every inmate of the house during her brief residence there.

Everything passed off very pleasantly, in spite of an undercurrent of regret on the part of Clifton that none of his family were present to sympathize with him in his new happiness, and at one o'clock the carriage came to take him and his young wife to the Grand Central Station, whence they were to start upon their tour through the mountains and lakes in the northern part of the state.

Madame Marton found it difficult to

"Well, I have some left even now." said madame, with significant emphasis." "and as for the coat—if I am to be taken care of all the rest of my life, I reckon I could afford to make you a little wonding present—ch?"

"A little one!" repeated Shirley, wind an appreciative sigh. "They are very lovely, and will be all the more precious to me because you have had them so long and worn them yourself."

"Bless you, child! You couldn't have thanked me in a sweeter way, that's what I call a spirit of true appreciation." And the deeply-moved woman bent, and for the second time, voluntarily kissed the lovely face uplifted to hers.

The morning of the wedding dawned in cloudless beauty, while the day proved to be unusually cool for the season, owing to a brisk easterly breeze, and at the hour appointed the happy young couple entered the chapel of Church, where they were to plight their solemn vow to each other.

The bride was very fair and lovely in her dainty traveling suit of delicate gray cashmere, exquisitely trimmed with silk of the same shade, and a becoming little hat of the same material, simply adorned with a beautiful algretic of pearls, mounted in silver, on her golden crowned head. Her only other cranament besides the boquet of bridal depreciation become her all in all but for a fortnight, for of late Shirley had become her all in all. But she would not mar her joy by so much as a regretful look on her wedding day; and so made herself quaintly jolly to concal her grief.

The adieus were all said, the good wishes, accompanied by showers of rice and other pleasantries usually attending the departure of a newly-wedded couple, all spoken. Shirley

"Nothing worth mentioning, dear," he repiled, recovering himself and smiling into her wondering eyes. "I felt a sudden chill in spite of the heat; but it has passed and I am all right now." He entered the vehicle and, lifting his hat to the group of watchers on the steps, they were driven away.

"I's bad luck to go back for anything muttered Madame Marton, as she slowly went up to her room to wipe away in secret tears which she had fought so hard to restrain while Shirley was in sight."

secret tears which she had fought so hard to restrain while Shirley was in sight.

The same thought had forced itself upon Clifton just as he reached the sidewalk, and with such startling abruptness that it sent a shiver of dread thrilling throughout his frame.

He was not supertitious—he had a sensible contempt for everything that savored of belief in hackneyed signs or omens; but that strange sensation had come upon him with such an appalling impression of impending evil that he involuntarily betrayed something of it.

Upon their arrival at the Grand Central Station they found a great crowd. Large numbers of people were departing upon their summer vacations. It seemed as if there had never been an exodus from the city before, while the baggage which was fast piling up, waiting to forwarded to its various destinations, was something heretofore unknown in railway experience.

Clifton was unable to find a seat for Shirley in the waiting-room, so she told him she would wait by the door and watch for him until he came back from having their baggage checked, when they would go directly to the parlor car, where they had chairs already engaged.

Telling her that he would not be long.

about it, he bade her a smiling au revoir and hurried away.

The upper half of the doors leading out to the baggage-room were of glass, and Shirley stationed herself before them and watched the handsome form of her and watched the handsome form of her and watched the handsome form of her and watched her a shifting out to the baggage-room were of glass, and t

As he did so he noticed, just opposite him, and waiting to be unloaded, a truck piled "mountain high" and very insecurely, too, he thought, with all sorts and sizes of traveling receptacles, and looking as if it was ready at any moment to topple over and come crashing to the floor.

"These porters are very careless," Clifton muttered, as he eyed the overloaded truck, "and there will be a serious accident here some day if they do not use more caution."

He turned to a porter who was at that moment passing him, and called his attention to the matter; but the man was hot and tired, and irritated from the unusual pressure of business, and swore not and tired, and irritated from the unusual pressure of business, and swore angrily at him for his interference.

Somewhat disconcerted, and rather indignant at the rude reception of his suggestion, Clifton stepped back to his place, and was relieved to see his trunks just being brought in from the sidewalk, where they had been deposited by the driver.

Just at that instant he heard a familiar voice near him, and, turning quickly at the sound, he saw his father standing close beside the carelessly loaded truck which a moment before had arrested his [To be Continued.]
