HER ONLY LOVE.

[BY CYNTHIA GREY.]

Many a man has vowed that he would never marry a girl who has had lovers before he came upon the scene. He wants the sweet privilege of awakening her maiden heart to the tender passion. He wants her to see the halo of love only as he pictures it to her. While this is romantic there are cases which do not turn out just as the fond lover willed it.

Who shall say that the philosophic lover is not the wisest after all who says: "As long as I am satisfied that she loves me with all her heart, I shall not trouble myself about the lovers who have gone before."

Many may stop to admire a rose, but it is only he who gathers it who knows its lasting sweetness. With many a girl the first love is but an experimental affair. She has no idea of the faults and follies of "the general run of mankind" until she has had several lovers who possessed these disqualifications. If a girl's first beau has been a flirt, casting sheep's eye at every pretty girl whom he met, she has had her lesson regarding fickle men. She is wise in determining to look further for she can find no novelty about the girl who has been alone and is a half fellow well met among his boon companions, would be a poor home prop as a husband.

Then there is the would-be wooer who takes rash business chances. A happy-go-lucky fellow he is who believes in "Come day, go day; the Lord will take care of Sunday." His certainly, would be a poor shoulder to lean upon. She resolutely says "no" to his pleadings, and turns hopefully to some other lover who may cross her path and who would be all her judgment, tells her he is the only love for her. Is it right that this man whom she finds perfection should balk because he hears that there have been other admirers who have laid their hearts at her feet? I say no! It would be doing the girl a grave injustice. He should know that if she elects to love him and marry him she will make him the best kind of a wife.

There are we see that it is not always wise for a man to hold fast and hard to prejudices regarding love. He should be glad that a woman is able to discriminate, and through her observations of other would-be lovers value him accordingly. It is the greatest blessing in life to have a contented wife, a woman who will not be constantly thrusting in a man's face the complaint: "Had she been a better judge of men she would never have married him."

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS
By M. E. G.

"Do your Christmas shopping now!" is the slogan ringing in our ears from many sides. Newspaper articles and advertisements all urge the buying public not to wait until the proverbial eleventh hour to purchase their Christmas gifts and supplies, but to do the bulk of it before the middle of December. The reason is self-evident. I have one grain of sympathy with our writers who are behind the counter, we cannot fail to realize how terrible must be the strain on them of that week of holiday shopping. The late working hours, the feverish rush, the incessant standing, these will tell for harm upon the system of any girl, and many of them are practically nervous wrecks when the 25th comes, utterly unable to enjoy the festivities of the day.

The postman and delivery boy also deserve our sympathy and aid in the mad rush preceding Christmas. The former serves us faithfully throughout the twelve months, and what a burden this extra Christmas mail must mean to him. He doesn't have a "Merry Christmas," as they say, and many of them are practically nervous wrecks when the 25th comes, utterly unable to enjoy the festivities of the day.

The passing through. If you want to forget your own troubles for a time and feel a touch of the genuine "human interest" thrill, walk leisurely up and down Dundas street a few times one of these busy Saturday mornings. After all, there is nothing in this fascinating pursuit to stare on one side for half an hour mentally noting the many types, classes and conditions as they pass by. It is a most interesting and useful exercise.

Women are there a-plenty; many going to and from the market. What hints of a good Sunday dinner peep from some of their baskets, chickens, perhaps a bunch of celery, or some rosy-cheeked apples, and sundry parcels that suggest blue-ribboned, quite frequently three or four little ones tag along behind the mother, and it is often difficult for the mother to keep track of them in the moving throng. And then, too, the numerous purchases as well. Important messenger boys push through the crowd; business men hasten by; the harsh cry of "newies" comes from the street; and a group of "country folks," as they are called, are seen. They are a general chat and their laughter, as they inquire after one another's health and well-being. Well, can they afford to be merry, for they are at the selling end of the butter, egg and turkey market.

A group of students pass. They are in a jovial mood today, for it is not Saturday. Bits of their talk about rugby and lectures drift to one, but suddenly one of the group is arrested by a sudden change of countenance. He is a young fellow, and he is looking at a girl who is walking towards him. He is looking at her with a look of intense interest. He is looking at her with a look of intense interest. He is looking at her with a look of intense interest.

At last it is possible to destroy all traces of superfluous hair without pain or injury to skin or complexion, and without the need for further emollients. It is a most interesting and useful exercise. It is a most interesting and useful exercise. It is a most interesting and useful exercise.

From childhood I was annoyed and humiliated by a distressing growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried a small fortune trying all the powder, paste and liquid preparations so widely advertised, only to make it worse. I was forced to the torture of the electric needle without getting rid of my blemish, until a travelled friend of mine told me of a simple, safe and harmless Japanese method, quite different from any other, which your own doctor would endorse. I made the hair disappear almost like magic in two minutes, and I have been permanently free of it. I am now free of it. I am now free of it. I am now free of it.

Boots and The Man.

I was walking up town the other afternoon with the Man Who Knows. It was a gloriously sunny day, with just enough frost in the air to tingle one's blood. A well-filled car passed us, bound for uptown. Why do you think all those healthy-looking, able-bodied women are riding on such a fine day as this?" he asked. "I don't know," I said. "Why?" The Man Who Knows smiled knowingly. "So many ladies persist in wearing high-heeled boots and no rubbers that when the pavements are icy, as they are to-day, they are simply scared to death to walk on them for fear of falling."

I glanced surreptitiously at my own none too sensible shoes. "But," I said, "high-heeled shoes look so much nicer than those flat, horrid, about ones." "Non-sense," replied the M. W. K. "If there's one thing ridiculous to my way of thinking, it is to see a woman go mincing along upon her toes, as if she were walking on tacks." "Well, what about the men who ride?" They at least don't wear French heels." "Oh, this is a busy season of the year, and no doubt most of them have to ride at noon to save time. Now, if the ladies could only— But the rest of it was lost for here my patience fled and I hurriedly made an excuse of some shopping and turned into a store.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for her wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like I too, I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy myself as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."

—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is used more widely and successfully than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, the most distressing periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

For Destruction of Moths.

Dear Miss Grey: I have just found out that one of my stair carpets is moth eaten; also an upstairs carpet. The cracks in the floor are wide thus indicating a hiding place for the vermin. How shall I get rid of them? H. H. M.

A.—Strew the carpet thickly with fine dry salt and roll it up upon this. Leave it alone for a week. Unroll and sweep hard. Burn the sweepings and sweep twice, once against the nap and once with it. Before laying it down again sift salt and red pepper into those mischievous cracks, and there will be no more moths. The salting will freshen the colors and the carpet and keep out the moths.

Scotch Shortcake Recipe.

Dear Miss Grey: Could you give me, through your valuable page, a recipe for making Scotch cake? Years ago when I went to school we used to buy for a penny a small, thin cake about four inches in diameter, which seemed to be made to melt in the mouth. It was very delicious. I have been unable to find the recipe. A.—Cream half a pound of fresh butter with a quarter pound of sugar and work it with cool, dry hands

Royal Vinolia Vanishing Cream

A PERFECT SKIN TONIC

To guard against the irritating effects of Fall and Winter winds on the complexion nothing is quite as effective as Royal Vinolia Vanishing Cream. The exquisitely stimulating and refreshing sensation that follows its use cannot be described—it must be felt to be appreciated. It gives to the skin the natural, normal glow of youth, and stimulates the pores to that proper activity which is the whole secret of a skin that is naturally clear, bright and elastic. It vanishes so completely that it can be safely used just before you put on your gloves, or just a minute before you go into company. Contains no grease. In patent and collapsible tubes, with winding and permanent cap.

Large Tubes, 25c. Sold by All Good Druggists.

Worldly Wisdom

It's a bad sign to write your name on a friend's note.
