

CLUE TO CARIBOO GASE IN TORN LETTER

Scattered Remnants on Trail Indicate $5,000 Was Taken—Only Cash Considered—Believe Haney is Leader

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 4.—Registered mail sacks torn open and scattered letters found on the Cariboo road near the scene of the express mail stage holdup of Monday throw light on the extent of the robbery. Twenty-three letters were taken from one mail sack and a cash number from each of the three others. Money and express orders were thrown away, the robbers contending that with taking the cash found, which at a conservative estimate was five thousand dollars. Investigation showed that the robbers headed in the direction of the west to the wild Chilcotin district to the west. By noon of the day of the robbery they must have crossed the one hundred bridge which spans the Chilcotin and are now hidden somewhere in the recesses of the cattle range country. Their natural route to the coast would be direct to Vancouver by way of Mission Junction and they could easily have reached this city by now. The belief is growing in the neighborhood of the holdup that William Haney, who with his brother, unsuccessfully held up a C. P. R. train at Notch Hill, last spring, planned and executed this robbery. After the killing of his brother at Ashcroft in a duel with a police officer, Haney probably escaped into the Chilcotin and remained in hiding until he was pulled out the present robbery. If it is Haney, he is probably now safe in some mountain retreat in that district.
