

"tempted of the Devil;" and my soul rose in praise to the Unseen Father, who, in all her woe and wandering had hedged her in by His love and power, and I involuntarily exclaimed.

"He hath indeed taken thee from the fearful pit and the miry clay."

"The lines have fallen unto thee in pleasant places."

THE END.