

models. The models that the Work Group feels are most likely to be suitable for application in the local/mesoscale range, which include the important physical and chemical processes and complement the long-range transport models, are the hybrid models.