

ish on Lake Champlain.—The New-Hampshire Grants.—History of the Dispute concerning them.—Another Invasion of the Mohawk Valley.—Active and successful Movements of Colonel Willett.—Death of Walter N. Butler.—Surrender of Lord Cornwallis.—Revolt in the New-York Regiments . . . . . Page 158

CHAPTER VII.

Capture of Joseph Betts.—His Craft and Cruelty as a Partisan.—His Execution.—Progress of the War, now drawing to a Close.—Negotiations for, and Treaty of Peace.—Conflicts with the Indians at the West.—Massacre of the Moravian Indians.—How it was avenged.—Cessation of Hostilities . . . . . 184

CHAPTER VIII.

Deplorable Condition of the Indians.—Removal of the Mohawks to Canada.—Negotiations of the United States with the Indians.—Red Jacket.—Cornplanter.—Visit of Brant to England.—Project of a General Indian War.—Anecdotes of Brant in London.—His Return to America . . . . . 209

CHAPTER IX.

Questions in Dispute subsequent to the Treaty of Peace.—Occupation of the Military Posts by the British.—Hostile Indications of the Red Men.—Great Council at Huron Village.—Evidence of British Machinations.—Brant's Troubles at Home.—His Efforts for the Improvement of his People . . . . . 222

CHAPTER X.

Indian Hostilities continued at the West.—General Harmar's Expedition.—Its equivocal Success.—Colonel Proctor's pacific Mission.—Its Failure.—Colonel Pickering's Council with the Six Nations.—General St. Clair's Expedition.—Its disastrous Issue.—The Indians led by Brant . . . . . 235

CHAPTER XI.

Visit of Brant and other Chiefs to Philadelphia.—Incidents of Brant's Journey.—Offers of the Government to Brant.—Attempts to kill him on his Return.—Efforts of the Government for Peace.—Council at the Au Glaize.—Its Failure . . . . . 260

CHAPTER XII.

Renewal of Hostilities.—Duplicity of the Canadian Government.—Council of the Six Nations.—Brant's Propositions.—War between France and England.—Its Effect on the Relations of England with the United States.—Spanish Emissaries among the Indians.—General Wayne's Expedition.—Decisive Battle, and total Defeat of the Indians.—Jay's Treaty, followed by a Treaty of Peace with the hostile Tribes . 284

CHAPTER XIII.

Brant's Difficulties with the Canadian Government.—Mission of John Norton to England.—Its Failure.—Brant charged with appropriating Moneys not his own.—Formally deposed from the Chieftainship of the Six Nations.—Intrigues of Red Jacket.—Brant's honourable Acquittal and Restoration . . . . . 308