

land of the Pilgrims; but to collect from various works, not generally read, such incidents in the early history of New England as are illustrative of the character of our ancestors, of the hardships they encountered, the principles on which they acted, and of the goodness, benevolence, and faithfulness towards them, of the God whom they served. We may not expect to find in every family, nor indeed in any family, all the books to which Mr. White has had access in preparing the volume before us; but the "wonder-working Providence of God," in behalf of our fathers, should be known and remembered by their children to the latest generation, in order that it may be known and remembered from whom our blessings come, and to whom we must look for the preservation and prosperity of the nation which His own right hand hath planted. Mr. White's History is of moderate size and moderate price, and deserves a place among the "household books" of New England.

---

From the N. H. Courier, Concord, N. H.

"EARLY HISTORY OF NEW ENGLAND."—We learn that nearly the whole of the first emission of this book, of which we took some notice last week, has been disposed of, and that its publisher, I. S. BOYD, of this place, feels greatly encouraged that it will have a very extensive circulation throughout the country. All friends to the education of the great mass of the people, will rejoice to know that there is a strong desire among the whole of our New England population to become very familiar with the history of their own country. This work and Walker's improved Hinton's History, are just what are needed at the present time.