England Can Laugh at Fear of Invasion—Recruiting Best for Some Time.

LONDON, July 28 .- Before adjournment of the British Parliament for a recess of six weeks, Premier Asquith phasized his confidence of the victory of the allies in France and Belgium, of the Russians in Poland and of the Anglo-French expedition to the Dardanelles. He paid a particular tribute to the valor of the Russian army, saying that he did not think that in the whole military history had there been a more magnificent example of disdividual and collective initiative than had been shown by the whole Russian army in the past few weeks. The British, fleet also came in for high the seas are clear, or substantially
