Then the band struck up the old German melody to which we sing "America", and to which the English sing "God Save the Queen." On the cards at each plate was printed the British song; but the assemblage, being American, the guests not unnaturally struck up the national hymn and finished one stanza of it with ferror before the president could interfere. At the conclusion of this verse he stopped the orchestra and said good humoredly:

"This meeting has got ahead of its presiding officer a little. I now propose a toast to the Queen, who has reigned for sixty years. May she reign many years longer."

After the drinking of the toast, the orchestra again started up that ambiguous tune, and a number of the guests, picking up the printed cards, began the British hymn. They sang:

"Is this America or England?"

"Give us the 'Star Spangled Banner,'" cried another.

A large American flag was draped on the balcony where the orchestra sat, but too far up to be within reach of those below.

"Toss down Old Glory," some one called.

"We'll carry it up to the platform."
Nobody obeyed this demand, which, in the interest of peace and quiet, was perhaps just as well. Amid no little confusion the song ended. When the double singing began Ian Maclaren's face for a moment was a picture of amazement. Then he banished all expression from it, and listened without the moving of a muscle.

Rome, Dec. 2.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Marquis di Rudini, Prime Minister, declared that the statement that Erythrea was to be transformed into a civil and commercial colony of Italy was premature, and that a final decision as to the Government's course in regard to its African possessions had not been reached.
