

Wineen's Millinery Opening

Your family and your intimate friends may judge you by the qualities under your clothes, but the rest of the world are influenced by appearances.

Your apparel speaks for you (or against you). What it says depends upon your taste in dress. Taste is not a heaven-sent gift, born in the fortunate, but a common sense. Taste is often a matter of acquaintance with a good store.

You could pick one of our new fall hats in our millinery department with your eyes closed and not make a mistake. You may be sure that every hat is right, though of course there are a variety of patterns to choose from.

This is Opening Week. You are invited.

CHINESE BLACKMAILERS THEY PAY AND PREY

"Trust" Exists in Toronto to Which Uneducated Celestials Are Forced to Pay Tolls Regularly.

A great blackmail trust is operating among the Chinese of Toronto. This statement is made to The World by one who says that he has learned these facts after three months' investigation among the Chinese of the city. In this trust there are some five or seven "big bosses" who are in control of a force of some forty tribute collectors.

This trust is great because it operates upon practically the whole Chinese population of about 1500 in the city. The big bosses who are among the wealthiest celestials in Toronto sit at ease in their restaurants or groceries directing millions in the art of extortion both as to the gathering of information and the collection of the tribute.

There are three chief aids to these potentates of blackmail, all of which operate against the victims. The first is the trust among the Chinese themselves. These are divided and the best educated Chinese of the city, and one of them at least had and still has the ear of the police who believe him to be a "good Chinaman."

The great point upon which the most of the blackmail is based is the inherent desire of the Chinese to gamble. A Chinaman gambling as he breathes. In Hongkong a group of street urchins will buy for 10 cash (1-2 cent) a couple of Mandarin oranges. These are divided and the seeds carefully counted for upon the number of these each youngster has laid his wager. With such a people there is bound to be extensive gambling, which may not be prevented by any law, least of all by one which hinges and requires the proof of a "take-off."

The second feature in the blackmailers' evident advantage is the ignorance of the law which naturally exists among the bulk of the Chinese population. This blackmail is by no means discouraged in their home land and is not infrequently practiced there by the petty officials of the government. An honest and graft-proof police is something foreign to the Chinese understanding. Also a law which, when grasped by the poor man of obscure station, does not act as a two-edged knife grasped in the naked hand is outside the limits of his comprehension.

The third great weapon in the hands of the vampire is his own knowledge, limited to that of the English language, which makes him as the one-eyed among the blind, a king among his brethren who have no working knowledge of the strange, new tongue. The blackmailers may describe the attitude of the authorities as he will and his more ignorant brother, even to the point, cannot be sure that he is being misled. His fear of the law leads him to pay rather than risk finding out for himself. The existence of these facts, which is set out by The World's informant, is undoubtedly true. Just how this state of affairs is being used, to what extent and by whom it is hard to say. One faction among the Chinese declare that it is being operated in one direction by one faction and another avers that the weapons are wielded by another set. All seem to agree that the bulk of the population are the victims.

"For ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain, the Heathen Chinese are peculiar" is said out by one who knew them well. The greatest credence seems to be due to the unbiased statement of perhaps the only white man in the city who has an opportunity of knowing of the Chinese. This man, who has spent several years with John Chinaman at home, is The World's informant.

They Go to Church on Sunday. This gentleman says that this blackmail trust, as described above, exists and operates in the city. He declares that more than one Chinaman has attended church and Sunday school to gain that great power—a knowledge of the language, and so far from absorbing the promises made with the teaching returned to prey upon his fellows thru the gentle art of blackmail.

Until recently no club or other regularly constituted place of recreation has been open to the Chinaman. He naturally sought out places where he might play, and as all did not work at the same hours nor all have sufficient room, the places of those whose shops were the more central and roomy were sought as meeting places. This entailed a certain expense and inconvenience for the proprietor, and when a few police raids were taken place, induced by disgruntled losers, the inconvenience and risk became greater, and to cover this detriment a rake off was established to compensate the keeper.

Here was the material for a rich harvest ready to the hand of the blackmailers. He sent and still sends his man around to discuss the matter. It was explained that law is a grievous thing when even the innocent is hampered by the innocent as well as the guilty. Intimacy and influence with the powers were insinuated and lastly it was hinted that a certain sum of money might be one of the big bosses or one of their friends. His chance for a square deal looks small.

He pays on Wednesday, and it comes out of the "take off."

SIR JAMES RETURNING. The World understands that Sir James Whitney is returning to Toronto somewhat earlier than he first contemplated, and that he will be in Canada before the middle of the month, perhaps with the intention of straightening out the power game.

UNION STOCK YARDS PLANS EARLY ERECTION

No Time Will Be Lost in Replacing Sheds—Big Day in Markham—County News.

WEST TORONTO, Aug. 30.—Andrew Dods, secretary of the Union Stock Yards Company, is making active preparations to have the rebuilding of the yards commenced without delay. A meeting of the directors of the company will be held to-morrow (Monday) to talk over the proposed arrangements. Mr. Dods is strongly in favor of having the sheds built of concrete, and went to Hamilton on Saturday to consult an expert on this line of work, with regard to cost, etc. There are at the present time sufficient accommodations for 130 cars loads of cattle, and the run all summer has ranged from 80 to 90 cars, so it is not likely the capacity of the sheds will be overstocked, at least till the cold weather sets in. The general proposal of the directors, it appears, is to build a large concrete building, with accommodation for the sheep at one end, and the hogs at the other. Whether the sheds will be built of wood or concrete is not yet decided, but the officials state that the buildings, whatever material may be decided on for their construction, will be placed much further apart. Other preventatives will also be taken to prevent any possible fire in future gaining headway so quickly that it could not be got under control, as was the case on Tuesday. Temporary pens will be erected immediately for the accommodation of the sheep.

WESTON, Aug. 29.—George Robinson, who resides at the corner of Church and Main-streets, was fined $2 and costs by Magistrate for illegally connecting the village wires with the house on Church-street occupied by the cattle sheds. The wires were connected and caused a cross circuit, which narrowly escaped setting the house on fire. The wires were disconnected, but the connection was made again by a bylaw which forbids citizens interfering in this way with the village wires, without first obtaining permission from the council.

into the discussion, and dispersed the crowd.

The board of works will meet to-morrow evening, and the property committee on Tuesday evening.

The Mayor, who presided, of the Pattern Makers' Union, addressed the C.P.R. strikers on Saturday morning in St. James' Hall. He stated that the men all over the road were standing firm, just as they were doing in West Toronto.

NEED BETTER COURT ROOM. Will County Council Provide More Commodious Quarters?

The York County Council at its very next meeting in November might well consider the matter of providing Police Magistrate with reasonable accommodations for the holding of the county police court. The room at present in use is ill-lighted and totally inadequate to accommodate those called there thru business, let alone the general public. Police Magistrate Gill is most efficient and proverbially patient, but the substitution of a large, well-lighted room would be hailed with pleasure by every man doing business in the county. The suggestion has been frequently made that the council chamber, which is only in use three weeks in the year, might be utilized.

HUMBER BAY. Constable Last Night Found Launch in the Number Marsh.

HUMBER BAY, Aug. 30.—County Constable George Simpson last night found the gasoline launch stolen from A. E. Rea a few days ago, from the Mimico Creek. The boat was found about 160 yards from the other one, in the marsh, and was well concealed and hidden. It was restored to Mr. Rea. The local county officers resent the hideout which has been freely made to them by the city detectives, and a few others. Constable Simpson has been untiring in the work of following up the Humber robbery case, and after the discovery of the launch spent the whole of Sunday and Monday nights near the cave, in the hope of the return of the thieves.

A POLITICAL BAROMETER.

Vermont State Elections To-Morrow May Decide Presidential Contest.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 30.—Practically all the active work of the Vermont State campaign closed last night. On Tuesday next the voters will express their choice for state officers and the result of the balloting is eagerly awaited throughout the country, as the Vermont gubernatorial vote in a presidential campaign is accepted as a political barometer.

While it is generally accepted that the Republicans will elect their entire state ticket, the size of their plurality is a subject of great interest. It is the accepted rule here, that whenever the Republican plurality in Vermont state campaign in a presidential year, falls below 25,000, the Democrat National ticket is successful.

The Democrats claim that this plurality will be reduced, while the Republican managers aver that it will be increased materially.

The Wrath of a Sultan. Sultan, the huge South African lion which will be seen to-morrow on the corduroy at the exhibition in the big wild animal arena of Col. Francis Ferris, has a temper of his own. He knows just what he wants and is exact moment he wants it. The other day the air of his cage was hot and the big brute, was very thirsty. He had drunk the water in his dish, and at noon, the hour when the pans are replenished, the keeper passed without seeing the Sultan. The lion knew that he was being neglected, and he was angry. He kept passing around and this time Sultan lifted a mighty paw, and sent it splashing under the bars of his cage. The blow was so terrific that the iron handle was crumpled like a match. The pan struck the heel of his keeper's boot. It was not two minutes
