MAY BUILD ON RIVER

There is a possibility that Upper Gagetown may again become the headquarters of a large wooden shipbuilding industry and that vessels launched from the up-river village will, within the next year, be sailing the seas.

It is reported that several provincial capitalists and some provincial lumber operators have had a preliminary plan for some time the establishing of a ship yard at that point and that within the last few days a representative of the upper province has taken a quiet trip up river and looked over several possible sites at Upper Gagetown and Oromocto.

It is understood that the work may be started this winter or at latest during the next spring, if suitable land for the purpose of yards can be secured at a reasonable cost. It is probable that about 300 men will be employed in the work, should it get under way, and that wherever possible experienced hands will be picked up.
