Although official announcement will not be made until tomorrow it is understood that at a meeting of the cabinet council tonight an order-in-council was passed prohibiting the importation of alcholic liquors into Canada. This will shut off a big source of waste during war time. It will affect the Scotch and Irish whiskeys, champagnes and other wet goods now imported to the extent of millions of dollars worth each year. It will hit especially the Quebec importing houses which are now the distributing centres for the dry provinces.

Still more drastic legislation looking to the curtailment of liquor drinking in Canada is forecasted for the near future. Prohibition of the manufacture of liquor, entirely except under license for medical or other necessary purposes, is the next step. In brief what the government aims to do is to secure total prohibition by the process of cutting off all external or internal sources of supply leaving only present stocks on hand to be gradually absorbed by those who are willing to pay the high prices for "booze" which are bound to rule almost immediately.
