COLLEGE OF HOME BREWING RAIDED; MASH SEIZED

Bayonne Establishment Taught Students How to Make Their Own.
Bayonne, N. J., Sept. 19.—The only college of home brewing in this section of the country, according to prohibition enforcement agents, has been broken up. Prohibition Division Chief Appleby and seventeen of his enforcement agents raided the place, but the headmaster and all his pupils had departed in evident haste, leaving several barrels of mash and a long assortment of educational material.

Mr. Appleby said that the establishment was unique among bootlegging and stilling industries in that the man whose arrest he is seeking did not interest himself particularly in selling the product, but specialized in teaching citizens how to make their own. After the evidence is assorted and studied, information may be forthcoming as to the nature of graduation exercises and the names of alumni, he said.

LORNEVILLE AND ST. JOHN DRAMATIC SETTINGS OF FILM

Director of Local Movie Considers the Plot Alone Guarantees Success—And it Becomes Unique for Its Truthful Local Color.

If you want to see a real dramatist at work, peep round the door of Room 18, the Dufferin, any time this week between breakfast and midnight. You'll find a tall, strong looking man with black eye-brows and dark silvery curls hammering away at a typewriter. That is the role being played at present by David M. Hartford, the director of the coming movie "Blue Water." He is making the final drafts of the pictured plot here on the spot.

Already the main scenes have been chosen and here the city of St. John and the quaint little cove of Lorneville may be prominently mentioned. The fishing village along the bay was selected for its picturesque and true life setting for the ground of the novel. Mr. Hartford said he was very much struck by the powerful action and drama contained in "Blue Water." From the dramatic side alone, he considers the story a box office success, regardless of the unique scenery and fishing adventure. There are two very pretty romances in the piece. The hero is Shorty Westover, an orphan lad of the sea with a history and later on he finds a chum in a French youth named Jules whom he saves from a bully on the schooner. In due time Jules takes notice of a remarkably interesting Lorneville girl who comes to St. John to train for a nurse. Shorty comes in to his own when he rescues the daughter, and crew, of a St. John captain whose vessel gets waterlogged on a south sea voyage. That is about all of the tale that Mr. Hartford will let out, but he declares there is more to it than a book author could set down.

To his mind it takes the camera to develop characters that must appear as of somewhat minor possibilities in a written delineation of character. Appearances tell more than words. Hence the week of typewriting.

By Monday the schooner will be ready and the actors will be here from New York and actual filming under way. After that it is a matter of speedy production with perhaps three months before the hundred odd copies will have been distributed all over the continent for public release. Mr. Hartford considers a picture like "Blue Water" could have been handled off the coast of either Florida or California, but never with the same true life vividness, as here everything is in its natural every day local color and natural conditions. Thus it is expected to get a picture faithful to its unique subject.

Mr. Hartford gives his opinion that once a picture is good enough to find a release it is bound to make money. This factor has been settled in advance for "Blue Water" and it only remains for the director to live up to his task. Asked about the fabulous profits made by some of his own and other big pictures, Mr. Hartford said one did not look at only the successful ones. There is the other kind as well, but he had a curious comment to make about the poorer ones. "For my part" he declared, "I have never done a picture that lost money. Neither has Mr. Shipman. But I recall a chat I had some time back with George Spoor, president of Basanay. To my certain knowledge Basanay had in his history put some atrociously poor films, but Spoor called them his bookkeeper and books to prove that even they did not lose. The market is big and has wonderful absorption power."

Save Fuel in Cooking

SMP Diamond Ware
Boils in 5 minutes Boils in 8 minutes

YOU don't buy a new cooking pot or pan every day, but you do buy fuel of some sort every day. Every day you are using up a certain amount of coal or wood or gas or electricity for cooking purposes. And fuel costs money these days! To save fuel use

SMP Diamond Ware
"A Face of Porcelain and A Heart of Steel"

Diamond and Pearl Ware cooking utensils heat more quickly than utensils made all of metal, such as copper, brass or aluminum.

Try This Test

You can easily prove it. Take a small Diamond or Pearl Ware saucepan. Put in it a pint of cold water, set it on the hot stove—whether it be a coal, wood, oil, gas or electric range—and time how long it takes to come to a boil.

Do the same thing in the same size pan of brass, copper or aluminum. If the water boils in five minutes in the Diamond or Pearl Ware saucepan, it will take eight minutes—three minutes more—in the pan made of brass, copper or aluminum.

Diamond and Pearl Ware Save Fuel

Why waste fuel on all-metal or other ware, when you can buy Diamond or Pearl kitchen utensils at to-day's reasonable prices? Why not try this timing experiment and satisfy yourself?

Diamond Ware is blue and white outside with a pure white lining and three coats of enamel.

Pearl Ware is grey and white with two coats of enamel.
